Gifts of Freezers Reported

Allegedly Given To Noted Persons By Company Now Prominent in Inquiry

By Marvin L. Arrowsmith
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman and Chief Justice Vinson were reported today to have been sent home freezers by a company figuring in the Senate's five percent inquiry.

The White House officially denied any knowledge of the matter.

Vinson said he'll let the facts come out in the course of the congressional investigation.

But for the moment, the investigation raced down another track.

It brought a charge by Senator Mundt (R-SD) that President Truman's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, appeared to have entered into an "ingenious plot" to "cut the throats" of eight officers in the running for a top army job.

Vaughan Silent

Vaughan so far has been silent. But word at the White House today was that he indicated he is ready to be sworn and testify before the committee whenever it wants to hear him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Senator Hoey (D-N.C.) said today Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's Army aide, has indicated his willingness to testify in the Senate "five percent" hearings.

Hoey, chairman of the committee conducting the inquiry did not say when Vaughan would be called.

Hoey made the statement to reporters at the White House. General Vaughan has indicated his willingness to testify before the committee at any time the committee wants to hear him, Hoey said.

The committee is looking into the activities of the so-called five-percenters—persons who seek out government contracts for others at a fee.

Vaughan's name has entered the hearing on several counts—mainly as a reported close friend of James V. Hunt, former army officer, surplus property sales consultant and more recently a management consultant.

Today the committee heard testimony that Hunt's secretary delivered to Vaughan's office in the White House last spring a memorandum from Maj. Gen. Allden H. Waitt on the fitness of certain army officers to succeed Waitt as army chemical corps chief.

No Replacement

No replacement was made at the time.

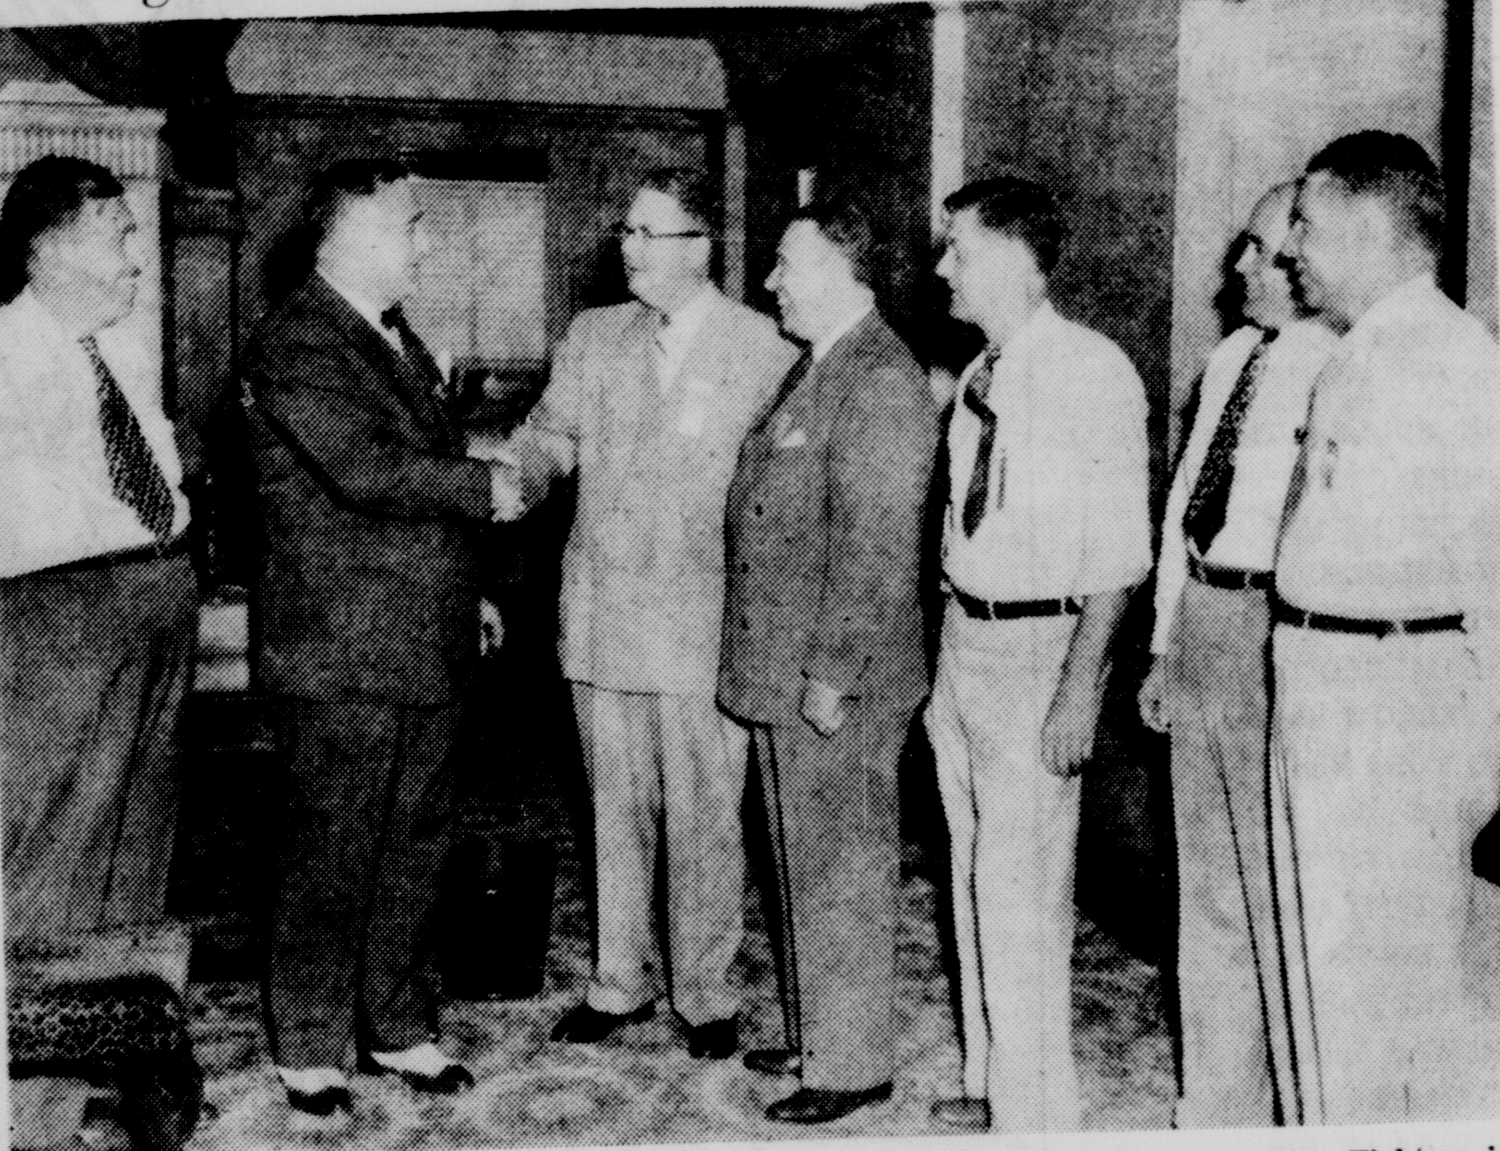

Waitt on July 16 was suspended as chemical chief by Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, along with Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, quartermaster general.

Gray said in a statement that the senate inquiry had turned up evidence "which indicates that General Waitt improperly furnished personnel data to an individual not in the military service and who was not entitled to receive such data."

On July 7, Miss Mildred Ortmeier, Hunt's secretary, testified to committee and army investigators that Waitt dictated a memorandum to her entitled "Eligible

Void Law Requiring Officials To Believe in Christianity

UPPER MARLBORO, Md., Aug. 12.—(AP)—A 95-year-old Maryland law requiring officials to swear to belief in the Christian religion has been declared invalid.

Circuit court judge Charles C. Marbury made the ruling yesterday, as a result, J. Milton Stanford, Brentwood town councilman elect will be allowed to take office despite his religious beliefs.

Stanford is a Pantheist—one who believes the universe is God but who does not accept the doctrine of a future state of rewards and punishments.

He had refused to take the oath of office when he learned it contained a sentence "I believe in the Christian religion." The town council had refused to seat him.

Judge Marbury's ruling was on Stanford's suit to force the council to permit him to take office.

Marbury said that, although the law has been on the books since 1854, he doubts whether the state legislature has any right to force a public official to declare that he believes in God.

Firemen from the state of Missouri met at the Bothwell hotel this morning at 10:00 o'clock to open the seventh annual convention of the Missouri State Council of Fire Fighters, which will last two days closing Saturday night.

All members of Local 823 I.A.F.F., representing the Sedalia Fire Department were in attendance, excepting those who have the duty for the day.

John P. Redmond, president, International Association of Fire Fighters of Washington, D. C.; William D. Buck, vice-president of St. Louis and Richard Zammarr, of Kansas City, who is president of the Missouri fire fighters are here for the convention.

Rev. H. U. Campbell, pastor of the Fifth Street Methodist church, gave the opening invocation.

Mayor Julian H. Bagby was on hand to welcome the convention group, and indicated that he wanted them to have a good time while in Sedalia, and hoped they would return to this city on other occasions.

Many Women Present

Mr. Buck, during his acceptance of Mayor Bagby's welcoming address, said he had never seen such a wonderful turnout of the ladies, who accompanied their husbands to this convention.

The remainder of the morning and part of this afternoon was spent in the regular order of business, roll call of officers, and delegates, appointments of committees and announcements.

After lunch, movies were shown at the hotel by Jack Shoemaker.

In addition to being the president of International Association of Fire Fighters, Mr. Redmond served in all ranks from private to division fire marshal as a member of the Chicago Fire Department. He spent 18 years as vice president of International Association before being elected president. He is a member of the Dust Explosion Hazard Committee of the National Fire Protection Association.

On Council

He is a member of the advisory fireways council committee and is on the original committee of President Truman's conference on Fire Prevention and a member of continuation committee of the President's conference on fire prevention. He has recently been appointed by the United States Government and just returned as a labor advisor to the International Labor Organization Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland.

In his afternoon speech, Mr. Redmond spoke on observations abroad and the activities of the International Labor Organization, while serving as a member on the committee.

He related his observations of the labor advisory to European and Asia conference submitted to ECA on July 5 and 6.

A report was made by A. S. Phillips, an attorney of St. Louis, following the main address of the afternoon.

The fireman and their accompanying wives, wound up the first day's convention with a banquet held at the Old Missouri Homestead.

The convention group will convene tomorrow morning at 10:00 a. m.

Fire on Sixth Floor of J. C. Missouri Hotel

Woman Rescued; One Guest Dies Of Heart Attack

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 12.—(AP)—A woman was rescued from a sixth floor window ledge of the Missouri hotel early today as a fire damaged four or five rooms of the hostelry.

One guest, A. F. Noecker, about 65, Clayton, Mo., died of a heart attack during the excitement.

The fire was discovered about 2:45 a. m. in a sixth floor room. Hotel employees first sought to extinguish the flames and then called the fire department.

Firemen put an 85 foot ladder to her perch and Fireman John Grisham climbed up and brought her down.

Enroute to Illinois

Mrs. Barnhouse was enroute to Ottawa, Ill., to visit relatives. She had arrived a short time before the fire from Pittsburg, Kas., where she had attended the funeral of another relative.

Edward Sheeha, manager of the hotel, said the fire broke out in a sixth floor room occupied by F. J. Green of St. Louis, a veterinarian blind salesman.

Sheeha said Green told him he woke up and found his hair was on fire and "flames were all around him." He gave the alarm and fled. He was not seriously burned but the room was gutted.

No Immediate Estimate

Several adjoining rooms and the hallway were charred. Sheeha could not estimate the damage immediately.

He said all the sixth floor rooms were occupied but all the guests got out safely.

Noecker, 61, collapsed in the lobby when the fire broke out. Other guests thought he had fainted but a doctor pronounced him dead, probably of a heart attack caused by the excitement.

Heavy Loss

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 12.—(AP)—N. M. Chapman of Shreveport, La., told the Associated Press he and his wife lost about $2,500 in money and jewelry in a hotel fire here early today.

Chapman, a hosiery company operator, said he and his wife managed to get out of their Missouri hotel room by wrapping wet bath towels around their heads and walking half-dressed down two floors from the smoke and flame filled portion of the sixth floor.

He said they tried two or three times to leave by the hall door. Each time the smoke and heat got worse. They used the towels at his wife's suggestion and walked over the then flaming corridor and down the stairs.

Made Way to Fire Escape

After descending several floors, he said, they made their way to the fire escape, then to the top of a kitchen annex. Firemen helped them to the ground, Chapman said.

A doctor was required to help Mrs. Chapman who suffered from the smoke, the husband said.

After returning to their room, he went on, he found Mrs. Chapman's jeweled wrist watch on the floor. But she reported loss of one ring worth $2,000 and two others of lesser value. Also lost, Chapman said, was his wallet containing $142 in cash and his wrist

Possibility of Marriage Has Not Been Discussed, Said V-P

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Vice President Barkley said today he has not even discussed the possibility of marriage with Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, St. Louis widow.

The vice president, emerging from a cabinet session, told White House reporters:

"The matter of a wedding has never been mentioned or discussed, even on the fringes, between us."

Barkley described Mrs. Hadley, with whom he attended a baseball game last weekend as "a very lovely and charming woman." But he specifically denied that there would be a wedding in Paducah, Ky., tomorrow.

To Be His Guests

"I'm going to Paducah tomorrow to participate in the dedication of an airport to be named Barkley field," he said.

"There will be no wedding," he was asked.

"No, sir," he replied.

Pressed as to whether he would be in a wedding as a best man or otherwise, he said:

"No, sir, this thing is getting funny."

Asked pointblank whether he will marry Mrs. Hadley, Barkley said:

Bicycle-Auto Collision; Boy Sprains Wrist

Accident Occurs On Ohio Avenue About 1:00 O'clock

A bicyclist escaped serious injuries shortly after 1:00 o'clock this afternoon, when he was knocked down from his bicycle, thrown upon the hood of an automobile, and finally slid down the front fender, landing in the center of Ohio avenue in the 100 block.

He is Phillip Lucas, about 15, of 415 North Engineer avenue. He was taken to the Bothwell hospital in a police car, where an X-ray picture was taken. His only injury reported was a sprained wrist.

Billy Lane, a salesman of Cincinnati, Ohio, who was an eye witness gave the following account of the accident: He said three bicyclists were traveling south on Ohio avenue, and Lucas in an attempt to go around a truck, hit the on-coming car dead center. Lane said he heard Lucas yell to the other boys on their bicycles, "Watch me go around this truck."

Another Eye Witness

Amos H. Rehmer of Florence another eye witness verified Mr. Lane's account of the accident.

The bicycle was twisted and torn apart at the fork, and was wrecked beyond repair. The automobile, which was involved in the accident was a 1947 Dodge coach, driven by Clay Schroeder of near Beaman. A dent in dead center of the grill, and a few scratches was the extent of damage to the car.

The police were at the scene directing traffic and keeping order in the large crowd which assembled. They did not make any arrests.

Counter Charges By GOP

Reply to Truman's Assertion That Filibusters Are Delaying Many Bills

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Truman's assertion that Republican filibusters are delaying money bills in the Senate brought GOP counter charges today that the Democrats are stalling Congress' adjournment.

Senator Morse (R-Ore.) told a reporter he thinks there is a Democratic plot to keep Congress in session and thereby keep Republican lawmakers off the stump this fall.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, retorted that this is "only a figment of the Senator's imagination."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, and Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of his party's policy committee, took issue with the president on the money bill question.

Wherry Comment

Wherry called reporters together to tell them his belief that Mr. Truman, in complaining at delays, was actually reflecting on the Democratic leadership.

The president made his filibuster-delay statement at a news conference yesterday.

Senator Taft said forcefully that there hasn't been any Republican filibuster.

"There has been no filibuster by Republicans on any bill," Taft declared. "We have consistently fought increases made by the Democratic appropriations committee and there have been so many of these that there have been delays."

"The Republican 80th Congress approved all appropriations bills by June 15 last year. The Democratic leadership of the 81st can't escape responsibility for the fact that there still are two basic bills which haven't even been brought up for Senate consideration."

Lucas said the Senate will take up the Interior department appropriations bill today after a decision is reached on the so-called basing point bill.

The huge $14,800,000,000 Armed Services bill seems unlikely to get Senate action before Monday.

Taft noted that the $5,797,000,000 Foreign Aid bill passed by the Senate was delayed by a point of order by Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, which sent it back to committee for several days.

On the adjournment front, Morse told a reporter he thinks there is a definite move afoot among administration Democrats to delay quitting so that GOP members seeking reelection won't have much time to campaign this year.

"They know that some of us, like Senator Taft of Ohio, Senator Donnell of Missouri and myself are pretty vigorous campaigners and I think they want to hamstring us as much as they can," Morse said.

Defeat at the Polls Did Not End Hoover's Public Life

By Bruce Blossat

Herbert Hoover's attainment of his 75th birthday marks the finish of a long, useful public life for the former Republican president.

He made that milestone the final one himself. There's no telling what public chores might still fall to him were he willing to go on serving a little longer.

Hoover may well confound future historians,
for he resists easy cataloging. His is a career of contradictions.

In the years after his defeat in 1932 at the hands of the late President Roosevelt, Hoover
probably was one of the most severely maligned
chief executives in U. S. history. To listen to his Democratic detractors, one would have thought we had never seen a worse president. He became the symbol of the Great Depression.

Yet Historian Arthur M. Schlesinger reports that a poll of historians on the relative stature
of American presidents placed Hoover in the "average" group rather than with the poor or below average. Only 10 were rated above average.

Hoover, the depression president, was the same man who had first touched the public imagination by his handling of world food and relief problems during and after World War I.
In those days the label "humanitarian" was often attached to him. It was seldom used in the 1930's.

President Roosevelt did not see fit to make use of Hoover's evident talent for organizational problems. But President Truman did. He returned the aging Californian to public service
in 1945 by ordering him to make a 2-months' survey of famine stricken peoples in Europe
and elsewhere.

Then Mr. Truman chose Hoover to head a new commission on government reorganization.
The Republicans' elder statesman pitched in to make the job his crowning, final public duty—
a labor of love. For he believes strongly in the need for economies gained through streamlining the sprawled out federal government of today.

By now all America knows that the Hoover commission undertook the most gigantic reshaping of government agencies in world history.
No matter in what degree its recommendations
are carried out, it will have left its permanent mark on American life.

Thus Hoover has stamped his personality and character on the nation. But what has happened to him meantime? Did his humiliation in depression times scar him deeply? He would be less than human if it did not.

Still, the jobs he has since held in public service must have gone far toward compensating him. They are proof of his courage in rising above crushing defeat. They are proof, too, of a genuine desire for public service beyond any normal call of duty.

Best of all, Hoover has demonstrated what an ex-president can do if he is determined to be useful and not to be thrown into the discard.

How About 'Longest Trial'?

A reporter noted that a certain woman who testified in the New York trial of 11 Communist leaders was the "tallest witness" yet to appear on the stand.

It's that kind of a case. Inevitably, one of these days there'll be a report on the "shortest witness" and then perhaps "the first witness with a goatee," and so on.

The trial has run six months now and forecasts for another half year. So it wouldn't be too upsetting if some enterprising merchant should offer a handsome door prize to the first spectator through the courtroom portals on the 250th day of the proceedings.

Dark Outlook for White House

The White House architect says it may take two years to make the President's home safe to live in again. If that gloomy forecast proves accurate, President Truman may go down in history as the chief executive who spent less time in the White House than any other twotermer on record.

Than any since John Adams, that is, for he was the first president to live there. Possibly Governor Dewey wouldn't have been so eager for Truman's job if he'd known it meant living in modest Blair House instead of the fabled
white mansion across the street.

Quirino's Visit Causes Diplomatic Headache in Washington

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—Philippine President Elpidio Quirino received the customary formal amenities during his Washington visit but, privately, top officials breathed a sigh of relief when he departed.

Reason was a gingerly handled situation that astonished and embarrassed them.

Three leading members of Quirino's party
were prominent Jap collaborators and violent U.
S. denouncers. They are:

Jose Yulo, chief justice of the supreme court in the Jap-created puppet government. Yulo was personally decorated by Emperor Hirohito for outstanding services to Japan. Yulo is now a member of Quirino's Council of State.

Federico Mangahas, zealous supporter of the Japs and ghost writer of virulently anti-American speeches for top Filipino collaborators. Mangahas is now Quirino's private secretary.

Vicente Albano Pacis, leading collaborationist
propagandist who poured out a steady stream of anti-American fulminations in the press and on the radio. He is press chief of Quirino's party.

President Quirino, personally, has an inpec-cable resistance record. His wife and other members of his family were killed by the Japs because of his steadfast refusal to collaborate. Friends explain the presence of the three collaborators in his party as due to "political necessity."

Quirino is seeking re-election this year in a very uncertain race. His leading opponent is Jose P. Laurel, who was president of the Jap puppet government. Despite his extreme collaborationist record, including a declaration of war against the U. S., Laurel was freed from prison in an amnesty proclaimed by his close friend and fellow collaborationist, the late President Manuel Roxas. Another strong candidate opposing Quirino is Jose Avelino, wily Tammanytype politician.

Quirino's friends say his three collaborationist
associates are giving important help in his re-election campaign. This is particularly true of Yulo, credited with being one of the smartest business-men and best money-raisers in the Philippines. Yulo is an intimate of Ambassador Joaquin M. Elizalde, who has represented his country in Washington off and on for a number of years. Elizalde is rated as the wealthiest man in the Philippines.

In Filipino circles it is claimed one reason for Quirino's visit was to promote a U. S.
loan to Elizalde's extensive business interests.

Washington officials were particularly annoyed at the presence of the three collaborationists
because of lack of enthusiasm about the whole idea of Quirino's visit. The plan originated with his campaign managers. They conceived it as a smart campaign maneuver. The official invitation was extended reluctantly and only after much wire-pulling.

Finders Keepers

Washington state's Senators Warren G. Magnuson, D., and Harry Cain, R., are at bitter
loggerheads over the Tacoma postmastership.
Tacoma is Cain's home town and he is demanding the appointment for one of his adherents, William E. Patrick, former Army
colonel. Magnuson is just as insistently supporting John MacMonagle, disabled veteran who has been acting postmaster for four years.

Cain took the controversy directly to Magnuson, saying, "I thought a senator had the right to recommend the postmaster for his home town?"

"Perhaps so, in some cases," retorted Magnuson, "but in this case there are two strikes against you. One is that my man was originally recommended by the congressman of his district and he has strong support in Tacoma. The other strike is that you Republicans are not in control this year as you were last. That makes a big difference, and that is why my man will get the appointment."

Unemployment Figures

Accuracy of the Census Bureau's last 4,100-000 unemployment report is sharply questioned
by the Public Affairs Institute. According to
Dr. Dewey Anderson, P. A. I. director, the

Anderson also sharply challenges Commerce
Secretary Sawyer's contention that increase in unemployment is due largely to the influx of young new workers looking for jobs. Anderson says the statistics don't bear that out.

"A comparison of changes in the labor force
during May-June," he declares, "shows that 800,000 fewer young people became active job seekers this year than during the same period
last year. The official unemployment figures are not realistic. Large numbers of jobless are not being taken into consideration for various technical reasons that don't hold water on examination."

Flashes

Senator Charles Tobey, R., N. H., wept openly
during the Labor Committee hearing on the bill for federal aid in the fight against multiple sclerosis. One of the witnesses was Mrs. Lou Gehrig, widow of the baseball star who died
of the disease . . . Secretaries Dean Acheson and Louis Johnson warmly assured the Foreign Relations Committee there is no ill feeling between them over military meddling in foreign policy . . . Rhode Island Democrats are trying to persuade Thomas G. Corcoran, onetime top
New Deal brain-truster, to re-enter the political arena. He has given no indication that he is interested.

California Not So Strange

While Southern California continues to attract
new people by the thousands, many a visitor
professes not to like what he sees there.

To some, the informal mode of dress is shock-
ing. To others, the free-ranging architecture, usually translated into dazzling white stucco, is the chief offender. These and other elements make a pattern of restlessness that seems strange.

Actually it isn't strange at all. Californians more often than not are people from other states who are just doing out there what they are afraid to do at home in Iowa or Georgia or
New York.

Early Polio Symptoms Vary Deceptively Among Victims

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

The most important step in combating poliomyelitis is to make the diagnosis as soon as possible so that treatment can be begun promptly. This is particularly difficult because the first symptoms often resemble those of an ordinary cold or mild infection.
Paralysis does not set in for several days as a rule.

No two patients who contract
polio show exactly the same symptoms. The best results from treatment, therefore, require judgment, skill, and experience in order to choose those methods best suited to the particular victim.
Not only is medical care important, but good nursing, physical therapy and other treatments are necessary to get the best results.

Hospitals Well Equipped

Many hospitals are now well equipped to handle patients with polio. Much of this has been made possible by the funds made available to them through the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, to which so many generous-hearted citizens throughout the country have contributed.

The muscular paralysis which comes on after the first few days
of the disease is accompanied by painful muscle spasms. These can be greatly relieved by hot wet packs, properly applied and by nursing care. The skin tenderness which is also so common is also helped by such treatments.

At the time when the disease is acute every effort has to be made to keep the muscles in the best possible condition so that they will respond to the later treatments and training. Bed rest is needless to say, important as are the other measures like plenty of fluids which are used for any infectious disease.

Medical science is constantly investigating the methods of treatment used for polio and trying to devise better ones. Several drugs and many other methods have place in the treatment of the acute illness. As yet, however, a sure cure for all victims of the disease has not been discovered.

Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

THE DOCTOR ANSWERS

By Edwin P. Jordan, M. D.
QUESTION: Is it true that parents who have brown eyes cannot have a child with blue eyes?

ANSWER: This statement is not true. Many people with brown eyes carry a gene or hereditary factor for blue eyes. It is thoroughly possible, and indeed has happened many times, that two brown-eyed parents will have only blue-eyed children.

Bringing up Children is Work --Surprising as it May Seem

It's really amazing how many mothers today want the prestige
of motherhood and yet are resentful of its demands.

"All I hear all day long is
'Mommy this' and 'Mommy that,'"
they complain. Yet if a woman wants to have children—what else can she expect to hear all day long?

"The house seems to be in a mess all the time. It just seems as though you can't keep a house
looking half-way decent when you've got children." Of course, you can't. Just from looking at her friends' houses any bride
ought to figure that out before
she has children of her own.

"I'm so tired down sometimes
I think I'll go crazy." Why should that come as a surprise to any woman? A child tires a woman down completely until he's of school age—there's no secret about that. And he tires her down to a lesser degree until he's at least of high school age.

"When John gets home at 6 o'clock he's through. But I can't sit down and relax until the children are bathed and put to bed." Well, Grandma could have told any modern wife those facts of life. Don't she have a saying that goes something like: "A man works from sun to sun but a woman's work is never done?"

Better Resign Yourself, Mom

It's always something. Last month they all had colds. And now
I've got to start taking them to town for their dental check-ups." And it will always be something.

Where there are children, there are worries—and a woman might as well resign herself to it philosophically, instead of complaining.

Bringing up children is a long
row to hoe. It always has been and it always will be. So it's a little surprising that so many young mothers don't seem to expect it to be tough when they take on the job, or that they act so resentful once they find out that it is.

Apparently the modern girl knows all the facts of life except
the important one that children are a lot of trouble for a good many years.

• REFUGE

By Mildred Crain and Harwood White
Copyright 1949 by NEA Service, Inc.

THE STORY: A wealthy widow,
Mrs. Everson, has fled with her servants in two giant trailers to
"a place of safety" from atomic bombs, which she believes will rain in a war that is impending.
In the party are Mrs. Malone,
cook and housekeeper; the Marchese Dellecasse, Mrs. Everson's companion; Rudy, the handsome chauffeur, and Victor, the house-boy. Mrs. Everson tells Mrs. Malone that they will have to remain here, in the canyon country,
for several months and that the radio will inform them of the end
of civilization in atomic warfare.
But just before a dinner celebrating their arrival, Mrs. Malone notifies the air is still and stuffy.
"As if a gigantic shape had passed between the earth and sun" and the air is still and quiet. Nothing stirs.

XXI

RUDY and Victor were unloading the truck. Crates, barrels, metal cylinders, batteries, boxes
were stacked in the sand.

Mrs. Everson seemed to be supervising the job. She sat on one of the crates, displaying her beautiful legs, and checked off the supplies on a typewritten list.

When Victor came into the kitchen at 5 o'clock, he seemed morose. Mrs. Everson, he said, had decided that all the stuff must be re-loaded in the morning and hauled out of the river-bed into the forest. The big trailer would be shifted, too. Mrs. Malone wondered why.

Victor was very tired.
"Strange weather," he said. "It makes my head ache, and I have a pain behind my eyes."

"Maybe it's happened!" Mrs.
Malone cried.

Her heart seemed to catch, to stumble, to turn over.

"No," Victor said. "I thought of that. The radio is just as usual.
Bob Hope is on. The audience is laughing and whistling."

Dinner was ready to serve at 7 o'clock, but Mrs. Everson was 10 minutes late. When she appeared she was dressed as if for a state banquet or an opening night at the opera.

She wore a dress made of pale
gold lace, cut very low to display her smooth, strong shoulders. Her hair had been brushed and burnished; she had twisted it into a sort of one-sided coronet, a barbaric ornament in itself.

Around her throat, descending
in three strands across the splendor of her breast was a necklace of square emeralds. Diamond and emerald bracelets clasped both arms, so that with every gesture
she seemed to scatter sparks. Her feet were lightly shod in gilt sandals, the toes bare and enameled,
the heels tinted.

VICTOR, returning with the service plates, reported Mrs.
Everson's magnificence to Mrs.
Malone.

"Try to see, if you can! There they sit, conversing, as if they were in Paris or New York. She has half a million in jewels on her fingers!"

He struck his forehead with the back of his hand.

"Her perfume, Malone! It smells of ginger flowers and sandalwood
and jasmine. All for what?"

"Maybe Rudy—? Here, the soup . . ."

Later Victor brought a compliment:

"She says the ragout is excellent."

"It's not a ragout," Mrs. Malone said sharply. She felt dizzy and ill-tempered. The heat out-of-doors had penetrated the trailer
in spite of the cooling system. "I cooked the rabbit the way the French cook Belgian hare, with wine and spices. But she wouldn't know the difference."

A MOMENT later she heard the festive pop of a champagne
cork.

"They are drinking toasts," Victor reported. "To her. To our arrival. To the future. She is very excited about something. Her eyes are on fire. Her hand trembles."

"Maybe tomorrow . . ." Mrs.
Malone began.

"Maybe tonight!" Victor said.

At last the meal was over, the dishes washed and put away. Mrs.
Everson and the Marchese sat with little silver-lustre cups, sipped black coffee as thick as syrup and smoked; and listened to Pinza singing "Mattinata," to Trenet, to a magnificent recording of "Le Sacre du Printemps."

The cloying humidity made Mrs.
Malone's uniform cling to her body. She changed into a clean dress before going back to the small trailer for her own dinner.

As she stepped outside, she felt the blackness of the night like an enfolded and smothering blanket.
She stood for a moment in the absolute dark, listening.

The music came faintly from inside the trailer, and once she heard Mrs. Everson's laughter, deep-throated, cruel.

It was strange, but as she stood there Mrs. Malone could sense the great wall of mountains beyond
the forest. It seemed to her that she could comprehend their substance, their form, the processes
of their evolution.

The deep pressures at the core of the earth, gathering to resist the blow that was about to fall. The unimaginable atoms, molecules, geological structures about to be torn from their ancient order.

Would the mountain rampart stand? Or would there be a finality for all things? A world of red-hot rock, without atmosphere,
dead . . .

Midwest Auto Employees Have Picnic

About 100 persons attended the picnic of the Midwest Auto Stores employees and their families held at Sunny Point Cabin on the Lake of the Ozarks Sunday. This all-day event was in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the founding of the Midwest Auto Stores. The day was spent in many activities, such as skeet shooting, horse-shoes, croquet, swimming, boating and bridge. A noon meal, prepared by Mrs. Fred Kueck, was greatly enjoyed by all. A short business talk was made by Mr. Tom Hill, of Kansas City, after the noon meal. Other guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rollert of the National Battery Co.; Mr. and Mrs. Olin Hermann and family of Kansas City, Allied Division Manager of the Midwest Auto Stores; Mr. and Mrs. Kent Grubbs of Chanute, Kas., and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Wright, of Parsons, Kas. Accompanying Mr. Hill was John Zander of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce.

The club-house was decorated in the store colors for the occasion with displays depicting the growth of the Midwest Auto Stores from one Sedalia store to twelve company and thirteen allied dealer stores in Missouri and Kansas.

Each employee with five or more years of service was remembered with a gift. The presentation of gifts was made by Paul F. Hausam, president and general manager, to the following employees: Forest Allcorn, 814 East Tenth street; Fred Schlapper, 118 South Prospect avenue; Loren Hood, 1801 South Sneed avenue; Fred Brink, 1304 West Fourth street; Walter Alexander, route 4, Paul F. C. H. Ficken of Independence; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gardner of La Monte; Adolph Ficken and twin children of Lee's Summit. Ice cream was also served at the noon hour.

Prospective Bumper Crops May Cut Prices

July Survey Shows Price Level Some Above Parity

By Ovid A. Martin
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—The price advantage farmers have enjoyed since late 1941 may turn into a disadvantage within a few months.

So predicted agriculture department economists today as they eyed prospective bumper crops to be harvested in the fall and a sharply increasing supply of pork due to hit butcher shops in a month or so.

These seasonally increasing supplies of farm products are expected to pull down prices of many products.

The department has a standard for measuring farm prices. This standard is called "parity." When prices are at the level of this standard, they are deemed to be equally fair to the farmer and those who buy his products.

A July price survey showed the farm price level to be two per cent above this parity or "fair" standard. That meant that, on the basis of this measuring system, farmers had a slight advantage over users of his products.

Consumer Had Best of It
In the decade before the war, the consumer had all the better of it. Farm prices averaged below parity — in fact, down to 50 per cent of parity in 1933. The war, with its increased demand for food, pulled farm prices upward. In December, 1941, the farmers' long disadvantage turned into a slight advantage. Month by month the farmers' favorable position grew and grew, until price ceilings brought halt. But removal of price controls after the war permitted further increases.

By October, 1946, farmers' prices reached a record peak of 33 percent above the parity level. Then as postwar world shortages began to disappear, farm prices started downward.

Last Month's Level Low
Last month's level is the lowest since December, 1941. Officials expect prices to fall below the parity point by late fall if present crop production prospects are borne out.

Some products have been selling for much less than parity for months, particularly grains, potatoes, dairy products, eggs, cotton and oilseeds. These products have been bringing less than the so-called fair level largely because they are available in over-supply.

The latest price survey showed, for example, beef cattle were bringing prices 85 percent above the parity standard, hogs 38 per cent above and lambs 76 per cent above.

He said the wallet was under his pillow when he went to bed.

Police headquarters reported the Chapmans mentioned the losses but did not file a formal complaint. No other property losses were reported in the fire.

Ed Sheehy, manager of the hotel, said Chapman told him of the losses. Sheehy said he cashed a check for $50 for Chapman this morning so the couple could continue their automobile trip home.

The Chapmans were returning from Rochester, Minn. They arrived at the hotel last night about 11 p. m., a little more than three hours before the fire broke out in a nearby room.

Chosen as "Miss Missouri" was Jane Stone, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carney Stone of Jefferson City. Miss Stone weighs 119 pounds and is 5 feet, 6 inches tall with ash blond hair. She was the University of Missouri coed who was featured in a Life magazine feature recently in comparison with a Smith college student.

She has been working as a model in a Kansas City store this summer.

"Miss Kansas" was Shirley Hargiss, 22, daughter of W. H. "Bill" Hargiss of Topeka, Kas. — a former football and track coach at Kansas university. Judging was on talent, personality, and appearance in evening dress and bathing suits, each counting 24 per cent toward a total.

The two winners will represent the two states in the "Miss America" contest in Atlantic City in September.

Looks Like a Plot
Senator Mundt (R-SD) exclaimed:

"It looks to me like a sort of ingenious plot by which Hunt Waitt and Vaughan have connived to cut the throats of all the other officers trying to get that job."

Rogers said Waitt has acknowledged dictating the memorandum in Hunt's office, but he said both Waitt and Hunt deny that Hunt knew what was in it.

Mundt commented sarcastically: "We are expected to believe that Waitt dictated five pages of material in Hunt's office without Hunt knowing about it."

Mundt asked whether Waitt had a secretary of his own. He also asked whether Hunt's office is air-conditioned and Waitt's not. Rogers replied that Waitt himself will testify concerning those matters.

Rogers interrupted his reading of the transcript at one point to note that Waitt was "interested in being considered to replace himself in his job."

Name on Bill Doesn't Mean The Congressman Wrote it

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—Congressman Minner Mistletoe goes home and tells the folks: "Why, sure. Congress passed a housing bill for the low-income people. Now I think Congress ought to do it for you moderate income folks."

"In fact, I introduced a bill in Congress to do just that. I'll show you. Here's a copy of the very bill with my name on it."

Sure enough. There it is. Just as he said. But maybe he forgets to tell them how he came to get his name on the bill in the first place. For instance:

Last May a Congressman introduced a housing bill for moderate-income families. A couple of months later along came another Congressman who, for some reason, wanted his own name on the bill so, without changing a word in the bill itself, he scratched out the name of the first Congressman and wrote in his own name in ink.

Bill Was Printed

Congressman's name was on it. He may go home later and tell the folks about the bill, and himself, or, maybe he had another reason for doing what he did.

There's a lot of that done.

In the House there's a rule that only one member's name can appear on a bill.

Just to show how much support that particular bill has, a whole gang of other Congressmen may have the same bill reprinted with their name on it.

All Costs Money

All this costs the taxpayers money, of course, since it's the government who does the printing, and the cost of printing a bill depends upon the number of pages.

For instance, the idea of a world federation has a lot of support in the House.

About 103 bills—all identical but bearing in each case the name of a different Congressman—were introduced to back up world federation.

In the Senate there's no rule like that of the House. There any number of Senators all can have their names lumped together on one bill.

Name Means Nothing

And a Congressman's name on a bill doesn't mean he had anything to do with writing it. The job may have been done for him by the bill-writing experts employed by Congress, after he told them what he wanted.

Or, maybe it was written by the lawyers in some government agency. Or even by the lawyers of some outside organization which got a Congressman to introduce a bill for it as his own.

Some Congressmen don't always remember—or even recognize—a bill they introduced. For example: Rep. Wolverton, New Jersey Republican, is a member of the House Interstate Commerce committee. Sitting with other committee members this week, he was discussing a railway safety bill.

Some Parts Disliked

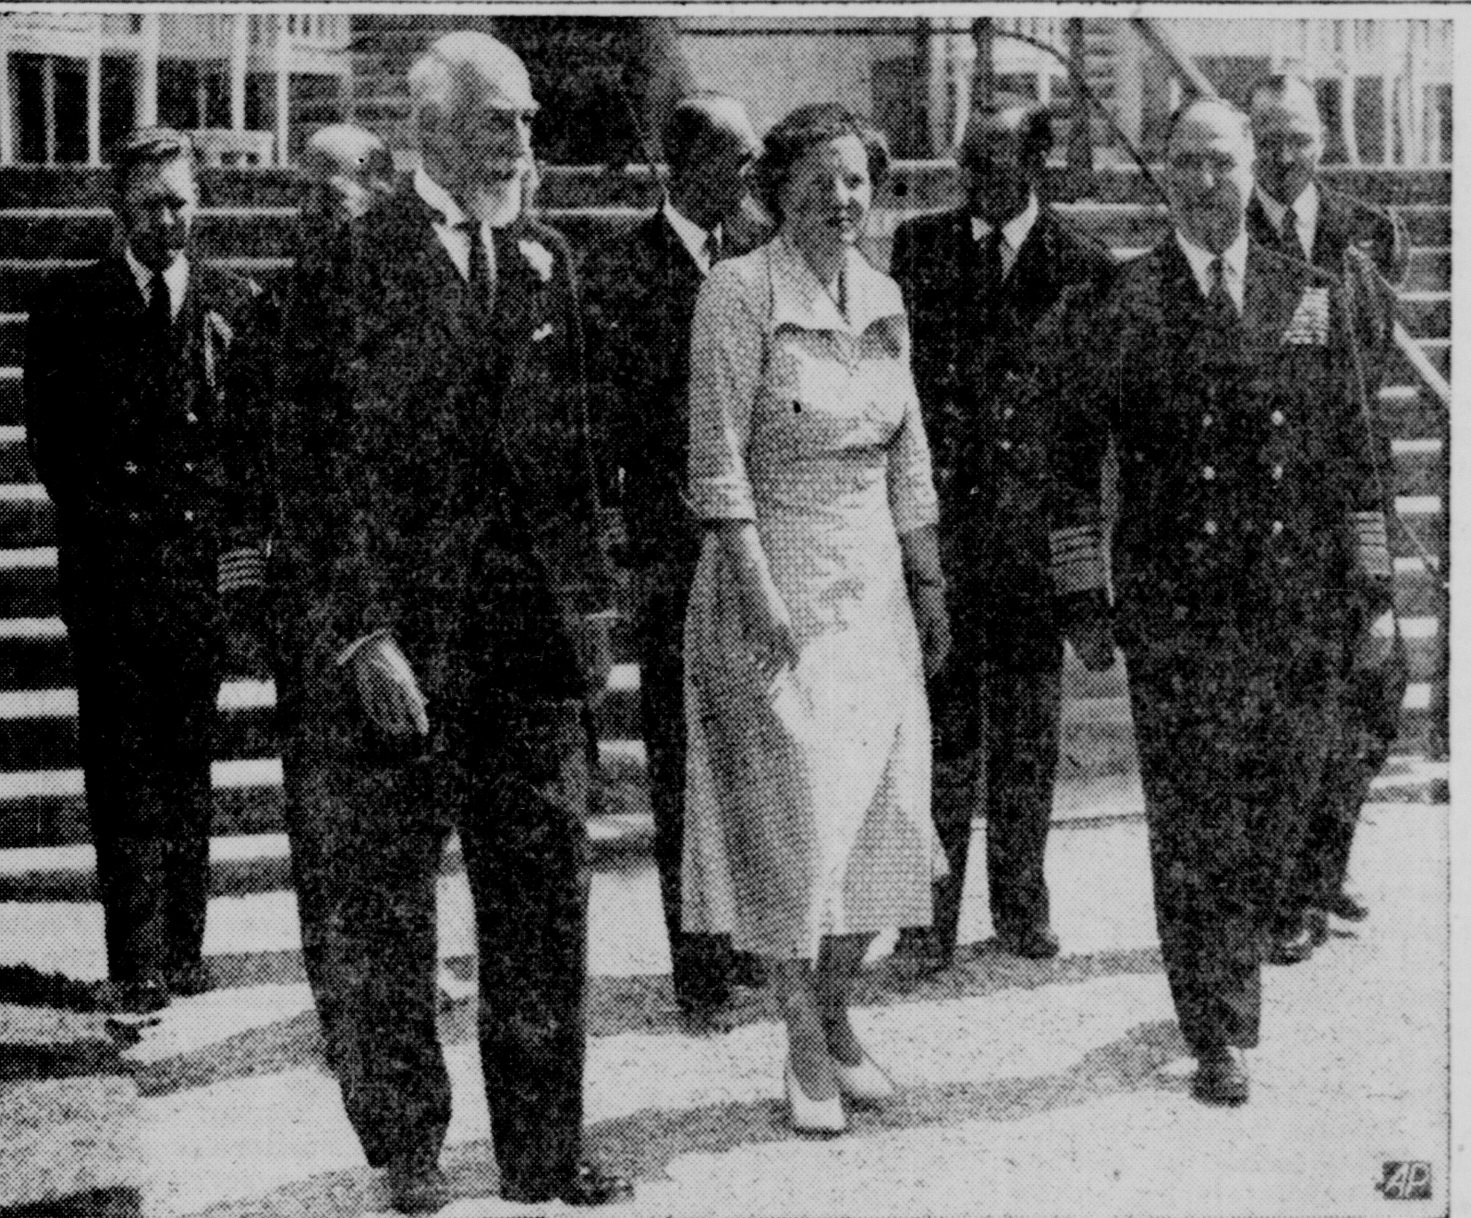

It had been introduced this year in Congress by the committee chairman, Rep. Crosser, Ohio Democrat. There were some things about the bill which Wolverton disliked.

He protested that the committee never had been told who wrote it. Just then William J. Patterson, a member of the Interstate Commerce committee, spoke up:

He said he and a member of his staff had written the bill a year ago and that a year ago it was introduced by Wolverton.

This year it was reintroduced by Crosser.

Wolverton remembered then and said he had introduced it as courtesy for the ICC although, when doing that, a Congressman may not like everything in the bill.

Donating Blood For The Second Time

Mrs. Clovis Moore, 108 South Prospect avenue, is making a second blood donation to the Bothwell hospital, through the cooperation of the Red Cross. Donors are so badly needed that seconds are being called. Women may give four times a year, men five times. An appeal is again made to those who can register to donate to do so.

Sunday School Lesson

Hebrews Sang Praises Of The Lord

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
The writer of the 137th Psalm, in a vivid historical record, tells how their Babylonian captors required mirth of the Jewish exiles in Babylon, saying: "Sing us one of the songs of Zion."
Just what these songs of Zion were we do not know, for many of the finest Psalms seem to have come out of the Exile, and the post-Exilic period. Probably they were earlier Psalms, or such songs as those in which great events and experiences in Jewish life and history had been celebrated, like that of Miriam, the Prophetess, in Exodus 15, and Psalms attributed to David.

The intensity with which the Jewish Exile resented Babylonian mockery, and his devotion to the songs of Israel, was marked in his passionate outburst: "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land? If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my tongue forget her cunning, let my tongue cling to the roof of my mouth."

This marked also, the place of song in Jewish religion and its part in the great Jewish feasts and festivals in which devotion to God, the Giver and Protector of His people, and the memory of God's dealings with them was kept alive.

There were many feasts and festivals, some local in character, but the great national festivals, involving all the people, were four: 1. The Feast of the Passover, followed immediately by the Feast of Unleavened Bread, during which the offering of a barley sheaf marked the opening of the reaping season. 2. The Feast of Pentecost, seven weeks later, or on the 50th day, celebrating the completion of the corn harvest. 3. The Feast of Tabernacles, the Jewish harvest home, when all had been gathered in a joyous time when the people lived in booths, commemorating the time when Israel had lived in tents in the journeying from Egypt. 4. The Feast of the Dedication of the Temple.

Hasting's Bible Dictionary states that at these four Feasts, or Festivals, some joyous, some solemn, the "Egyptian Hallel," consisting of Psalms 113-118, as one whole, was sung. This "Egyptian Hallel" was so-called to distinguish it from the "great Hallel" (Psalms 120 to 136) and from the Psalms of praise, 146 to 148, "Hallel" meaning "praise."

What these religious practices meant and their effect can well be seen in the continuity of Jewish life and religion, in spite of all the trials of dispersion, exile, persecution and disaster, and the changes in which nations and peoples, once formidable, have gone down to ruin.

The maintenance of periods and occasions of remembrance, telling it to the generation following, with religious fervor and in the spirit of devotion, and in the songs of a people — this, in the history and religion of Israel is something that other nations and peoples might well take to heart. Our national holidays tend to mean too little, or to become only interludes of pleasure, where they ought to be what a name that has lost its meaning implies — holy days, sanctified in the memory of the great things they celebrate an din reconsecration to God and man.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"SOUL" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 14, 1949.

Golden Text: Isa. 57:15.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else." (Deut. 4:39). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul, being Spirit, is seen in nothing imperfect nor material. Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit. Separated from man, who expresses Soul, Spirit would be a nonentity; man, divorced from Spirit, would lose his entity. But there is, there can be, no such division, for man is co-existent with God." (p. 477)

Spiritual Guidance

St. Paul's conversion took place when he was on his way to Damascus to devise new persecutions for the Christians. Blinded by the light of God, he cried out: "Lord, what do You want me to do?" He was given detailed instructions as to how he was to save himself from the slavery of evil and become an apostle of good.

Every Christian who seeks to know the road he must follow in order to win salvation has only to turn to God in humility and sincerity to obtain the guidance he needs. Only a few have been vouchsafed a personal revelation, but God provides other ways of finding the right road.

As a child, a man learns the simple precepts of right and wrong from his parents. As he grows older he either attends a school conducted under religious auspices, or goes to Sunday school. Throughout adolescence he has a variety of books at his disposal that will guide his mind along spiritual paths. Finally, he has the inspiration that comes from regular church-going and frequent consultation with his minister or priest.

Man's chief guide in pursuing the path of perfection is his conscience. This inner voice, which he is bound to cultivate and keep correctly informed, tells him what is lawful and what is wrong. If he is sincere, his conscience will illuminate him with its light and truth, and keep him from the snares of vanity and pride.

To obey one's conscience at all times means keeping a high resolve in the face of inevitable temptation. But it can be done by resorting to prayer in every trial and difficulty. The courage to make the right decision in all cases is a benefit we should ask repeatedly of God, who has promised to help all who approach Him with reverence and true devotion.

Germans Condemn All But Themselves For Their Woes

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Displays of intense nationalism and strident criticism of the Allied occupation have reached a high pitch during the Western German election campaign which reaches its climax Sunday.

The Germans are condemning everyone except themselves for the country's woes. There is an oratorical revolt against allied controls. The international Ruhr authority has been one of the prime objects of attack. So has the reparations program.

German leaders cite the presence in the west of 11,000,000 German refugees from the Polish and Russian zones as a development which the allies have refused to consider in its relationship to cost of government and reparations charges.

The campaign started out on domestic issues—Socialism versus free enterprise, states rights versus centralized government, the extent of federal economic controls, and the like.

The German political leaders for the most part supported the allied stand at the Paris conference ministers which failed to make any progress toward German unification. They wanted no compromise with Russia which might mean any interference or curtailment of the approach to independence promised by their projected new government.

Vilification Intensifies
So the Communists rallied at the other parties as dividers of Germany and called them collaborators.

To squelch this, the leaders of all major parties began to prove their freedom to criticize the allies. The vilification, it seems to me, has been permitted to reach a pitch far beyond what is technically allowed under the occupation rules. The German leaders who profess to be on "our side" have come pretty close to the some sort of thing for which the British once jailed Max Reimann, the Communist leader.

Britain and France have taken most of the pummeling. More prudence has been displayed regarding the U. S. which makes food shipments and other contributions to the German economy.

A good many allied authorities take the attitude that its just politics. The same type of thing to which democracies become accustomed in their own elections.

But there have been anti-semitic and other demonstrations distressingly reminiscent of Germany's recent history. If experienced German politicians expect to gain popular support through the type of appeals they have been making, then they must know that Germans are still infested with a lot of ideas which will make it necessary for the allies to keep them under close surveillance.

Chiefs Meet
K. C. Team
Here Tonight

Teams Face Each Other For First Time This Season

Sedalia Ban Johnson Chiefs will play a non-league game tonight at 8:00 o'clock, under the lights at Liberty park with the Katz Ban Johnson team of Kansas City. In addition to the game, a special program has been planned.

Both teams will enter the game leading their respective leagues, so this should be a thrilling game. This will be the first game the two teams will have played together this season.

Chiefs Defeat 5 K. C. Teams

In previous games, the Chiefs have beaten all five K. C. teams that have come to Sedalia this year. The Katz and Chiefs have each lost one game in the second half of the split season.

The Chiefs' regular lineup will be used on the field, with either Bob Brown or Gene May on the mound, with Whitworth or Barbour doing the catching chores.

Sedalia Chiefs have only three regular games left in this season's league schedule.

Sunday night they will play Boonville; Wednesday with Jefferson City and Friday night, August 19, a vital game with Moberly, the team which has been atop the league standings all season.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12—(P)—There's a basketball feud brewing in this City of Brotherly Love with Penn and Villanova opposing the trio of St. Joseph's, Temple and LaSalle.

Penn and Villanova have scheduled 11 doubleheaders at the Palestra. Bob Geasy has booked sixteen games involving the other three colleges at Convention hall. There are only four date conflicts but still that's a lot of dribbling.

Adding fuel to the feud, St. Joe and LaSalle have cancelled their traditional games with Penn. Why play in a doubleheader and collect a third when we can play you alone and get a half is what St. Joe and LaSalle told the Ivy leaguers.

Eagles Are Rated Favorites Over The
All-Star Retinue

By Jan Hartnett

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(P)—Football's gaudy, glimmering extravaganza—the 16th annual All-Star classic tonight will pit a squad of 70 collegians against the Philadelphia Eagles before upwards of 90,000 spectators in Soldier Field.

Coch Greasy Neale's national football league champion Eagles were rated last night as 10 point favorites over the All-Star retinue coached by Bud Wilkinson, the split-T mentor from Oklahoma. However, the records show that the collegians have sometimes won when few thought victory was possible.

Teams' Records

In the 1948 lake front football show, the Chicago Cardinals, coached by Jimmy Conzelman, romped to a 28 to 0 triumph over an All-Star team coached by Notre Dame's Frank Leahy. The over-all series stands at eight victories for the pros, five for the collegians and two ties. The first game of the series between the All-Stars and the Chicago Bears in 1934 wound up in a scoreless tie.

Although the hot weather experts favor the Eagles to down the collegians, the champs probably won't hit pay dirt through the star's line. Both All-Star players and coaches are pretty confident of that.

The collegians' line will be just as big, just as tough and just as speedy as anything the Eagles might display.

Louisville (unavailable) at Kansas City (unavailable).

Indians Have Hit Upon a Sure Fire Pennant Formula

By Joe Reichler
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Cleveland Indians have hit upon a sure-fire pennant formula—extra inning games.

The Tribe is in second place today, four and a half games behind the pace setting New York Yankees, but they're easily the overtime champions.

Including last night's 12-inning marathon with the Chicago White Sox, the Indians have played 14 games that went beyond the ninth inning this season. They've won 13 of them. They copped last night's by 6-5.

Red Sox Tighten Race

The Boston Red Sox helped tighten the race by knocking off the Yankees, 7-6, in regulation nine innings. A single by Bobby Doerr in the last half of the sixth scored Ted Williams from second, broke up a 6-6 deadlock and cut New York's margin over the third place Sox to five and a half games.

Williams wielded the big bat for the Sox. He hammered his 29th home run and added a couple of singles besides a base on balls.

Cleveland manager Lou Boudreau used 20 players and six pitchers to down the Sox. After overcoming a 5-3 deficit with two runs in the eighth, the Indians won in the 12th when Chicago second baseman Cass Michaels threw wildly to first in an attempt to complete a double play. Johnny Berardino scored from second on the error. Bob Feller, last of six Cleveland hurlers, was awarded the victory, his 11th and fifth straight.

Brooklyn Breaks Deadlock

Brooklyn broke a 4-day deadlock for first place in the National league with St. Louis, by outslugging the Philadelphia Phils 10-7. The victory put the Dodgers a half game up on the Cardinals, who were idle.

A home run by Pee Wee Reese with two mates aboard in the top of the eighth, snapped a 7-7 tie. A pair of four-baggers by Catcher Andy Seminick had kept the Phils in the game up to them.

Pittsburgh defeated the Chicago Cubs, 3-2, in the rubber tilt of their 3-game series. A single by Stan Rojek followed by Johnny Hopp's triple and Ralph Kiner's fly gave the Bucs two runs in the eighth.

The New York Giants and Boston Braves had to settle for a 7-7 tie when rain halted proceedings in the last half of the eighth.

Among the backfield stars who are expected to see service for the college All-Stars are Jack Mitchell, Oklahoma and Clyde Scott, Arkansas.

Kickoff: 7:30 p. m. (Central Standard Time).

Broadcasting: Mutual Broadcasting system starting at 7:30 p. m.

Knights Defeat Stover 9 to 1

The Knights of Columbus softball team defeated Stover last night in the Tri-County league tournament being held at Lincoln by a score of 9 to 1.

Schwemer was on the mound for the Knights and was in good form only allowing three hits, walking none and striking out 3. The Knights took a commanding lead by scoring five runs in the third inning, featured by a home run with the bases full by Ash the Knight's catcher. C. Weller for the Knights had two hits and scored three runs. In the first game of the evening Warsaw defeated Versailles by a score of 13 to 8. These were first round games.

Tonight's tournament schedule pits Lincoln against Warsaw at 8:00 p. m. and the Knights of Columbus against Ionia, whom they have defeated in two out of three games this year at 9:30 p. m. The finals of the tournament will be played on Saturday night as well as the game for third place.

Mangrum's woeful showing after his triumph in Tam's All-American which ended Tuesday put him in danger of missing the 32 put scorers and ties to be screened into Saturday's third round. Mangrum was 56 places behind with his 76 during the course of which he was anchored with a three-over-par seven on the 375-yard 17th hole.

The scene of a $10,000 top prize in the 72-hole scramble, however, generally had the boys crowding close behind Heafner.

Haefner Leads In First Round

CHICAGO, Aug. 12—(P)—As favorites faltered, hefty Clayton Haefner banged a six-under-par 66 for a one-stroke lead in the first 18-hole round of Tam O'Shanter's $35,200 Carnival, the "world" championship of golf.

Haefner, a runner-up in the 1949 National Open, whipped around Tam's par 36-36—72 in 33-33 using 33 puts for his one-stroke margin over Henry Ransom and Johnny Palmer, who had 67's.

The day's biggest disappointment was defending champion Lloyd Mangrum's collapse for a whopping 76, four over par. The year's top money-winner, Slammin' Sammy Snead, also was somewhat lack-lustre with an

Jr. Athletics
Play KC Team
On Saturday

Game Set For 9:00 P. M. at Liberty Park

The Sedalia Junior Athletics of the Boys' league will play the Kansas City Blue Valley Merchants, a team of the K. C. "3 and 2" league, under the lights of Liberty park Saturday night at 9:00 o'clock.

Last Tuesday, the local team defeated the Kansas City nine by a walloping score of 19-5, in which game Virgil Rogers hurled a no-hitter for the Junior Athletics.

The battery for Kansas City will be Lawson on the hill and White behind the plate. Gene Williams, manager of the A's said he would start Donny Delph on the hill and use Pirtle or Burton at catching.

Season Record

The Jr. Athletics are a half game out of first place in the Boys' league and have a season record of 24 victories against 8 defeats.

Approximately 250 tickets have already been sold for this game, according to Manager Williams, who said the money collected from this game will go toward paying for the baseball equipment and a baseball banquet to be held later on in the season.

Bill Hawley, third baseman for the Ban Johnson Chiefs is scheduled to umpire behind the plate. Emery "Gabby" Ellsworth will give a play by play description of the game over the loud speaker. The regular lineup of the Junior Athletics is: O'Bannon, 1b; Williams, 2b; Moore, ss; Bartlett, 3b; Trout, lf; Falls, cf; Day, rf.

Birds Took a Day Off And Dropped Back

By the Associated Press

With the Brooklyn Dodgers bucking the way they are, the St. Louis Cardinals just can't allow themselves an idle moment.

Yesterday they took a day off, according to schedule, after 28 games without a breather, and what happened? They dropped back half a game. The Dodgers politely took over first place — not so politely, as they handled Philadelphia rather roughly for a 10-7 victory last night, climaxed by Pee-wee Reese's three run homer in the eighth.

Staley on the Mound

All of which will keep the Cardinals on their mettle tonight as they open a three-game series with Pittsburgh at St. Louis, with Jerry Staley pitching against Tiny Bonham. Staley was red hot his last time out, when he shut out the New York Giants last Friday night.

The St. Louis Browns, who also took yesterday off, have a night game at Detroit, where they will be looking for a combination to point the way up from the American league cellar. Joe Ostrowski gets the call against Virgil Trucks.

Pro-Amateur
Golf Tourney
To be Held

Leading Golfers
Of State to Enter
Sedalia Event

The Sedalia Invitational Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament, the first of its kind ever to be held in this city is tentatively set for Monday, September 19, starting at 10 a. m. and continuing until 1:00 p. m.

The leading amateur and pro golfers from the state of Missouri are expected to attend. Leland Gibson, Blue Hills Country club professional, who is the president of the Midwest Professional Golfers Association, as well as a number of golfers from Kansas City plan to attend and compete in this tourney.

This tournament, sponsored by the Sedalia Athletic Association, will be held at the Sedalia Country club. The board of directors of the Country club, earlier this year, voted to make the course available to the association in order to hold this tournament in the belief that it would assist materially in promoting golf interest as well as recreational interest in this community.

Course in Good Condition

The Sedalia Country club course is currently in excellent condition in fairways and greens and is credited with being in as good condition as any course in Missouri.

At the close of competition in the tourney a golf clinic will be held during which time an exhibition by some of Missouri's leading golfers will demonstrate how a golf swing should be executed, including a number of trick shots.

Awards and trophies will total $500 in cash and prizes. The entry fee for the tournament will be five dollars per player. Golfers such as Leland Duke Gibson, Walt Blevins, Paul Leslie, former Western Open champion of Jefferson City; Tom Blair III, who reached the semi-finals of the Junior tourney at Houston, Tex., and Gene Webb, Springfield are expected to enter the tourney.

BOW FRONT BUFFET,

Support Plan
On Basic Crops
Is Favored

Proposal From Brannan Was Withdrawn

By Francis J. Kelly
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—A Senate agriculture subcommittee erased the last traces of the Brannan plan from a compromise farm price support bill Thursday then approved the measure unanimously.

It calls in general for government supports at 90 per cent of parity next year for the so-called basic crops, and flexible props which could range somewhat lower for others.

Senator Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the seven-man drafting subcommittee, said the compromise would be presented Saturday to the full committee, which has 13 members. Today's vote made its approval there appear certain, unless some member changes his mind.

Anderson, who has worked on nine different drafts of the compromise, originally advocated a limited trial of the "production payment" or farmers subsidy pay advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. So many restrictions were put around such a trial, however, that at length the proposal was withdrawn at Brannan's own request.

Is Not Giving Up Fight

In doing so, Brannan was not abandoning his fight for enactment of his program some time in the future.

Under Brannan's plan, the government would make no further effort to support the price of perishable farm products. Instead, they would be allowed to reach whatever level the market would bring. Brannan says this would help the consumers. However, if the farmers' return from a crop failed to match a previously determined "fair income" level, they would get subsidies from the government (which is to say the taxpayers) for the balance.

The crops which Congress has designated as basic—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts—would be supported at or near 90 per cent of parity next year. In succeeding years, if supplies became excessive, the secretary of agriculture could reduce the support level to as low as 75 per cent of parity.

Milk and butterfat would get support at 75 to 90 per cent, and the secretary would be empowered to go above 90 per cent on them if he determines that such a step was necessary.

A flexible support range of from 60 to 90 per cent of parity would be established for wool, mohair, tung nuts and Irish potatoes.

All other farm crops could be supported at up to 90 per cent of parity. Storable crops, such as oats, barley, rye and meats, would be supported at from 75 to 90 per cent of parity, unless a lower level was required by a lack of funds.

In order to qualify for the full supports, farmers would have to comply with planting, production and marketing restrictions promulgated by the secretary of agriculture.

The House has passed a bill to continue supports next year at a rigid 90 per cent of parity, after rejecting the Brannan plan.

But unless the House and Senate get together on mutually acceptable legislation, the delayed-action Aiken law will take effect next January. This measure, which permits flexible supports at 60 to 90 per cent of parity, was passed by the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

ice, in a report for the week ended August 6, said the rate of increase was slackening compared with late July. The Health Service said new cases increased only 25 per cent over the week ended July 30, while that week was 36 per cent ahead of the previous week.)

A state by state check showed some 3,100 new cases have developed from July 31 through August 9. The first four days of that period brought 1,400 new cases and the last five, 1,750 cases. The average was some 350 new cases a day.

The new cases brought the 1949 total to date to 11,000—4,000 above the similar 1948 period. The year 1948, which recorded a total of 27,680 cases, was the second worst in the country's history, topped only by the 30,000 in 1916.

However, the 1949 polio season started several weeks earlier this year. Some health authorities believe this may indicate the 1949 season also will end earlier.

The worst and most baffling spot in the country is Texas. Some 1,339 cases have been reported in that state this year, compared with 1,042 for the same period in 1948—worst year in the state's history. Polio ordinarily does not strike hard in the same area two years in a row. August and September are expected to be the worst months for Texas.

Other hardest hit states and cases to date include New York 1,110, Illinois 720, California 626, Missouri 597, Oklahoma 592, Arkansas 577, Michigan 569.

However, for the nation as a whole, only one of each 15,000 persons has contracted the disease and only one in each 150,000 has died from polio.

Crash By Plane; 26 Escaped

Hit Runway At Portland, Maine, Then Burned Thursday Night

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 11.—(P)—A Northeast Airlines plane from Boston crashed and burned on the Municipal Airport tonight. Everyone aboard—20 passengers and six employees—escaped safely.

The line's office at the field said the two-engine ship would be a complete loss.

"The left wing's gone and the rest is burning," an employee said. The plane was a special flight from Boston.

Three of the employees were in the plane's crew. The others were dead-heading.

Everyone escaped before flames enveloped the plane—a new Convair.

Apparently nobody was injured. The passengers included a month-old baby.

Byron Israelson, a Portland Press Herald reporter who was at the airport, said the plane hit the north-south runway "with a jolt."

"As it settled down there was a scraping noise, as if the landing gear collapsed. A shower of sparks rose from the plane and then it burst into flames."

Passengers and crew got out a rear emergency door, jumping about two feet to the ground. The regular exit was jammed shut.

A fleet of cabs, awaiting the plane's landing, drove out onto the runway. The drivers helped the passengers out and took them to the administration building.

All the passengers praised stewardess Patricia Donnellan, 23, of North Quincy, Mass., for her cool-headedness.

Miss Donnellan had been on the job just two and a half weeks. She said the plane "pancaked"—landed flat on its belly—when the landing gear apparently collapsed.

A passenger, Mrs. Cora Connors of Portland, said "it was amazing. The people in the ship were the calmest persons I ever saw."

Worst In Polio May Be Over

By The Associated Press

The spread of infantile paralysis leveled off in early August—normally one of the worst periods of the year—and health leaders in some areas of the nation expressed the hope the worst may be over.

Polio still is mounting in nearly every section of the country, an Associated Press survey showed today, but the rate of increase is holding steady.

(The U. S. Public Health Service, in a report for the week ended August 6, said the rate of increase was slackening compared with late July. The Health Service said new cases increased only 25 per cent over the week ended July 30, while that week was 36 per cent ahead of the previous week.)

Youths Lined The Banks of Park Lagoon

Raked In Fish That Came To The Top of Water

Several teen-aged fishermen lined the banks of the Liberty Park lagoon Thursday, raking in the fish by the dozens without exerting much effort.

Since chemicals have been spread over the lagoon to purify the water and to rid the lagoon of the odor and greenish slimy water now in existence, many fish have died.

Cat fish and bass seem to survive the chemicals in the lagoon but hundreds of gold fish could be seen coming up for air every so often and others half stunned are an easy catch for the fishermen who hook them in the gills, using no bait.

Two men in a boat Thursday netted three bushel baskets and three five-gallon cans full of dead fish, which were taken to the disposal grounds and buried. One of the men said all fish that lived through the day will continue to survive the chemicals, which are scheduled to show results in a day or two.

Donald Dietzman, 7-year-old fisherman was "big wheel" Thursday. He hauled the catch. Several of his buddies kept Donald constantly busy stringing eight and twelve inch fish on the line, which he had charge of dipping in the water.

Even though they were catching the fish by the pounds, the boys didn't know what they were going to do with them, because their catch consisted mostly of goldfish, considered inedible.

General Stay In Far East

MacArthur Is Of Opinion He Should Stay At His Post There

TOKYO, Friday, Aug. 12.—(P)—General MacArthur today declined to return to the United States.

In a statement he declared his full views on the strategic situation in the Far East were in the hands of the Department of the Army.

The general made his position clear after Senator Knowland (R-Calif.) had introduced a resolution in Washington to have MacArthur return and state his views on the foreign arms aid bill.

President Truman said in Washington that he would sign an order for MacArthur to return any time the occupation commander in Japan wanted to return.

Remain At Post

MacArthur said that while he was "deeply appreciative of the honor" reflected in the proposal that he go to Washington he believed "that during this moment of critical events in the Far East the interests of the American people are better served by my remaining at my post here."

The general added that he understood both the President and Secretary of Defense Johnson had left it up to him to decide.

Well Known Couple to Meet

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—(P)—Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley of St. Louis will be the guest of Vice President Barkley Sunday at Paducah, Ky., at a hometown celebration in his honor.

She will be accompanied by her 17-year-old daughter, Anne.

The vice president's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, are to come with him from Washington.

Their plans for the week-end were reported in Washington yesterday and confirmed here by friends of Mrs. Hadley.

The Paducah airport will be rededicated and renamed for the city's favorite son.

Railroad Clerk Killed

DECATUR, Ill., Aug. 11.—(P)—A Washab railroad clerk was killed early today by a moving car in the line's east Decatur yards.

Robert W. Rucker, 22, was the victim. Rucker formerly was employed by the road at Hannibal, Mo. His late father, I. K. Rucker, was a telegraph operator at Hannibal for many years.

Continued encroachments of government on the freedoms of the people unless resisted will lead to collectivism, he said. Freedom must be fought for and won in every generation.

President Bert Hathaway announced there would be a meeting of the board of directors at his home, 717 East Eleventh street, Friday night.

Child Seriously Wounded By Sister

FULTON, Mo., Aug. 11.—(P)—An eight-year-old girl was shot and gravely wounded here this afternoon when a rifle in the hands of her 12-year-old sister was discharged.

Esther Fletcher, was struck in the abdomen and the bullet lodged near her spine when the gun was accidentally discharged by her sister, Viola Fletcher. Hospital authorities at Fulton expressed belief the little girl would live.

The highway patrol report the gun apparently was accidentally discharged after the older girl picked it up. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fletcher were working in Fulton at the time of the accident.

Free Hand For Ford Walkout

Contract Talks To Continue For While At Least

DETROIT, Aug. 11.—(P)—A whopping strike vote victory today gave the CIO United Auto Workers a free hand in calling a Ford walkout.

UAW President Walter Reuther said, however, there would be no immediate strike. Contract talks will continue for a while at least.

In the state-conducted strike vote, Michigan Ford employees rolled up a 7-1 majority for a walkout. This handed the UAW extra ammunition to back up its drive for worker pensions.

Ford Motor Co., said the returns did not alter its position. The company has refused during two months of bargaining to consider any wage increase.

The union's International Executive Board met at 1 p. m. (EST) today to act on election results. It was expected to authorize union officers to order Ford's 106,000 hourly workers out whenever they see fit. Reuther said, however, that no announcement on the board's action would be forthcoming today.

Vote Was Heavy

The huge total of 75,230 ballots cast came as a surprise. It was 93 per cent of eligible voters.

The final count listed 65,001 for a strike and 9,549 against in 17 Michigan plants. Officials set aside 680 ballots.

Ford has insisted that wages be frozen at present levels for 12 months. In its stand, the company has become industry's first line of defense against the CIO's pension campaign.

The UAW is demanding $100 monthly pensions, health benefits and a cost-of-living wage increase.

Business Men Should Take Responsibility

Urging business men to take more interest in pending legislation and concern themselves with the growing tendency of government to extend its influence over the individual by laws and regulations, Tom V. Watson, National Affairs Advisor for the United States Chamber of Commerce, addressed Sedalia Kiwanians at their meeting in Bothwell hotel Thursday noon.

The speaker was introduced by John Zander, manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce. Guy M. Bailey was program chairman.

Mr. Watson in his talk stressed the importance of local chambers of commerce proving a program of work, establishment of a national affairs committee, and the acceptance of responsibilities by individual members. He encouraged business men to take a stand on legislative issues affecting themselves.

Referred to Inconsistencies

The speaker called attention to inconsistencies of business men who clamor for government economy, reduction of taxes on one hand and on the other appeal to Washington for government hand-outs for local projects.

Continued encroachments of government on the freedoms of the people unless resisted will lead to collectivism, he said. Freedom must be fought for and won in every generation.

President Bert Hathaway announced there would be a meeting of the board of directors at his home, 717 East Eleventh street, Friday night.

Charge Return Of Gambling

Mayor Of Jefferson City Makes It In Radio Address

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 11.—(P)—Commercialized gambling is moving back, "furtively and slyly," into Missouri's capital city, the mayor charged tonight in a radio address.

Mayor Lawrence Lutskewitz, former Jefferson City newspaperman, said the gambling is going on in hotel rooms and closed business rooms.

"There the free and easy boys congregate and seek to lure their victims," the Republican mayor declared on his regular weekly broadcast over station KWOS.

"They are difficult to detect," he said, "because they move from place to place. The authorities have been reliably informed that in one or two instances they have taken over gambling games that were started at private picnics and operated them on a grandiose scale, croupier stick ad all."

Places Not Mentioned

He did not use names or locate the alleged gambling games. Or have police raids been made recently.

Lutskewitz also pointed to the "lesser forms of gambling which are being constantly employed here for some good cause or other. No police raids have been made recently."

"They have the veneer of decency because they may be labeled as do-gooders. It is difficult to understand why the public goes for them as it does."

"The other day on High street (the main street in Jefferson City) at three of our principal business corners, automobiles and refrigerators lured dollars and dimes from the pockets of the gullible."

"x x x That sort of thing is against the law and if we countenance it we are party to the violation. It seems to be popular and enforcing the ordinance against it therefore is going to be extremely unpopular."

Lutskewitz, elected last April, said he would not act to stop such forms of lesser gambling for the first year of his term, unless the people desired that action.

Then he asked: "Do you want it that way next year?"

There have been frequent reports in the last seven months that commercialized gambling forces have been edging into various sections of the state.

Boy, 9, Struck By Lightning

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 11.—(P)—One of these days little Roger Alberts can touch the scars on his stomach and hips and recall: "Now when I was struck by lightning . . ."

A bolt of lightning smacked him down yesterday as he played in his yard in nearby Cedar City. It knocked him out for about five minutes.

The doctor said when he recovers from the burns he'll be all right.

But it was an awful jolt for nine-year-old Roger.

When he recovered consciousness he told his mother, Mrs. C. S. Alberts:

"I don't want to die, mother. I don't want to die."

Triplets Make Him Father Of 16 Children

OMAHA, Aug. 11.—(P)—When hospital attendants tonight told John Gardner of Council Bluffs, Ia., that his wife had given birth to triplets, he was speechless.

Gardner, an inspector for the U. S. Army Engineers, was already the father of 13 children, 12 of them by a previous marriage.

Support Plan On Basic Crops Is Favored

Proposal From Brannan Was Withdrawn

By Francis J. Kelly

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(P)—A Senate agriculture subcommittee erased the last traces of the Brannan plan from a compromise farm price support bill today, then approved the measure unanimously.

It calls in general for government supports at 90 per cent of parity next year for the so-called basic crops, and flexible props which could range somewhat lower for others.

Senator Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the seven-man drafting subcommittee, said the compromise would be presented Saturday to the full committee, which has 13 members. Today's vote made its approval there appear certain, unless some member changes his mind.

Anderson, who has worked on nine different drafts of the compromise, originally advocated a limited trial of the "production payment" or farmers subsidy pay advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. So many restrictions were put around such a trial, however, that at length the proposal was withdrawn at Brannan's own request.

In doing so, Brannan was not abandoning his fight for enactment of his program some time in the future.

Under Brannan's plan, the government would make no further effort to support the price of perishable farm products. Instead, they would be allowed to reach whatever level the market would bring. Brannan says this would help the consumers. However, if the farmers' return from a crop failed to match a previously determined "fair income" level, they would get subsidies from the government (which is to say the taxpayers) for the balance.

The crops which Congress has designated as basic—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts—would be supported at or near 90 per cent of parity next year. In succeeding years, if supplies became excessive, the secretary of agriculture could reduce the support level to as low as 75 per cent of parity.

Milk and butterfat would get support at 75 to 90 per cent, and the secretary would be empowered to go above 90 per cent on them if he determines that such a step was necessary.

A flexible support range of from 60 to 90 per cent of parity would be established for wool, mohair, tung nuts and Irish potatoes.

All other farm crops could be supported at up to 90 per cent of parity. Storable crops, such as oats, barley, rye and meats, would be supported at from 75 to 90 per cent of parity, unless a lower level was required by a lack of funds.

In order to qualify for the full supports, farmers would have to comply with planting, production and marketing restrictions promulgated by the secretary of agriculture.

The House has passed a bill to continue supports next year at a rigid 90 per cent of parity, after rejecting the Brannan plan.

But unless the House and Senate get together on mutually acceptable legislation, the delayed action Aiken law will take effect next January. This measure, which permits flexible supports at 60 to 90 per cent of parity, was passed by the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

Abe Rosenthal Visits His Old Home Town, Friends In Can.

Abe Rosenthal, 1003 West Seventh street, Mrs. Rosenthal and their two daughters have recently returned from a trip through the east and into Canada. Mr. Rosenthal's former home. They stopped in Brantford, where Mr. Rosenthal called on an old friend, a newspaper man.

After Cordial greetings the man remarked that Mr. Rosenthal's calling at that time was quite a coincidence, because only a few days before, in the "Twenty-five Years Ago" column, they had carried the following article:

"Abe Rosenthal, Hamilton, took over the leadership of the Temple Theatre Orchestra here."

In London, Ontario, Mr. Rosenthal was interviewed by a representative of the Free Press, where a lengthy story was carried. It reads in part:

"You can believe Abe Rosenthal when he says a town of 50,000 is capable of supporting a 50-piece symphony and a male choir. He's from Missouri and he can show you proof of both statements."

"When Abe was 14 and a resident of Hamilton, Ontario, he decided to learn how to play the violin. Three years later he made his living by music alone and continued music as a career until 1930, when he moved away from his home town."

Played at London

"In the meantime, he had conducted orchestras in theatres, and yesterday, when he paid a visit to The London Free Press, he recalled playing a road show at the Grand Theatre here. He was just beginning theatre stunts and the show was appropriately titled, 'Experience.'"

"He studied in Hamilton and Toronto and became concertmaster of the Hamilton Symphony."

"But Missouri called, and he went to Sedalia in 1930 to be employed by the Milton Oil Company. At present he is division manager of that company."

"Tell them Sedalia is 80 miles from Harry Truman's home town of Independence," Mr. Rosenthal advised.

Symphony Organized

"Whether nearness to the piano-playing president's town influenced him or not, remains an unanswered question. But the fact does stand that the Hamilton man turned to music in his leisure hours and helped organize the Sedalia Symphony Orchestra 15 years ago."

"Three years ago he began the Sedalia Choral Club, which at present consists of 34 members, all male, drawn from the town and surrounding district."

"The symphony had just 15 members its first few years. Mr. Rosenthal believes an orchestra should be started with a small number of good players and built up as additional able instrumentalists appear."

Depends on Conductor

"The success of an amateur orchestra depends greatly on the conductor, Mr. Rosenthal pointed out. He's the one who knows if a bassoon player (probably the only one in the symphony) can play a certain passage well. If he can't, he shouldn't be allowed to do so. The passage should be transcribed for another instrument whose player can play the notes properly.

"Sedalia has two schools of music in nearby towns to draw upon for players. The students give the orchestra superior talent and in return receive valuable experience in ensemble work. A board of judges 'passes' on every applicant for orchestral membership."

Offer Concerts

"Four concerts a year are given at a total cost to a subscriber of $1.50. Guest artists appear with the orchestra at performances which are given in the high school auditorium with seating capacity of 1,000."

"The choral concert, presented each year, has free admission. It depends on contributions for financial support. Only performance with admission charge in Sedalia was for the Freedom Train."

"The orchestra stays within Sedalia borders, but the male choir travels to near-by towns to present concerts."

Visiting Brother

"Abe Rosenthal is relaxing these days, visiting his brother, J. Rosenthal, at 917 Waterloo street. But it doesn't keep him from looking ahead to 'hobby days,' and training his 12-year-old daughter, Willis Ann, to play the flute so that she can be a member of the symphony's woodwind section. Another daughter, Joann, plays the piano and is accompanist for the orchestra."

"Greater things in the musical future of Sedalia are seen by its citizens."

Four-Room House Destroyed By Fire

Early Filing Of Claims Is Necessary

Losses of Benefits In Social Security Might Ensnare

Most workers seem to overlook the protection they have under the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance program for their families in case they should die, according to Scott Webber, manager of the Sedalia Social Security office.

That this family insurance protection is substantial, as compared with the cost, is demonstrated by the widows' claims, based on the wage records of their deceased husbands, which cross Mr. Webber's desk every day. This protection for survivors is in addition to retirement benefits if the worker lives to age 65.

Webber says that he has just reviewed a claim under which the widow will receive monthly checks amounting to $78.63 for herself and two children over a long period of years. The total payments will amount to $20,761 over a period of 37 years, assuming the widow does not remarry and that she lives to age 77, which is the customary life expectancy of women who reach age 65. The total amount of survivors insurance payments in this claim is made up of the following:

Monthly payments of $22.46 to the eldest child, age 2 years, until age 18 or for 189 months—$4,244.94;

Monthly payments of $22.47 to the youngest child, age 8 months, until age 18 or for 208 months—$4,673.76;

Monthly payments of $33.70 to the widow until September, 1967, when the youngest child reaches age 18, or for 208 months—$7,009.60;

When the youngest child is 18, all payments stop, for the law assumes that a woman and grown children can support themselves; however, when the widow reaches age 65, her monthly payment of $33.70 begins again, and running out her life expectancy of 144 months, this means an additional $4,852.80.

Based on Wages

These insurance benefits are based on the husband's total wages from January 1, 1937, until his death May 1, 1949, of $36,393.18. Thus, the family will receive survivors insurance payments totaling $20,761, at a premium cost of only $363.93 (1% of the husband's wages) with his employer having paid an equal amount. This is rather substantial protection in relation to the cost plus retirement protection if the worker attains age 65.

While $78.63 a month will not provide for full support of a family of three, in this case, with their modest home, some savings and private life insurance, the mother can rear the children in their home, which is what the Social Security Act

The major Girl Scout project for 1948 and continuing to March, 1949, was "Clothes for Friendship." Every Girl Scout in the United States was asked to assist in this program. More than 100,000 Clothing Kits were shipped abroad through the American Friends Service Committee.

The Girl Scout troops of Sedalia have received several acknowledgments of the 106 Clothing Kits sent from here.

The following letter was received this week by Mrs. H. C. Salveter, Commissioner, at the time the Kits were shipped.

"Dear Mrs. Salveter: Enclosed you will find a letter of thanks which we have received through the American Friends Service Committee from abroad, in appreciation of clothing kits.

"Since the young people abroad could not afford postage for each letter, the Friends sent them to us in bulk. We, in turn, are asking you to distribute this to the troop leader to whom it belongs. The reason for this is that in many cases the addresses on the envelopes are inaccurate, and we are anxious for each troop sending clothing kits to be thanked for them." Sincerely, Girl Scouts of the United States of America, Program Department.

The letter, written from the American Zone in Germany, is being mailed to Miss Mary Jane Cox, leader of Troop 25, Hubbard School.

Address on Postal Service Given to Members of Kiwanis

"The Postal Service, and Rural Free Delivery," was the subject of a talk by Paul G. Benson, Sedalia, rural mail carrier, and National Committeeman of the Rural Mail Carriers, Association, before the Sedalia Kiwanis Club. Mr. Benson's remarks were as follows:

"The Postal Service has been in existence since time immemorial. Posts were used to herald the fall of Ancient Babylon and numerous references are made in the Bible to the use and swiftness of the Posts. The original Posts could really be classified as Rural Delivery Service as they consisted of horses and men in relays to forward messages from outlying Provinces to the various Capitals of Ancient time.

"The Postal Service in this Country was established by the Continental Congress in 1775 and Benjamin Franklin was the first Postmaster General. It has kept pace with the growth of this great Nation until it now ranks in the scope of its operations with the country's largest business enterprises. It is owned by and operated for the American people. The Constitution of the United States provided for a national Postal system established as a Service institution. Since its inception—its motto has been 'The Mail Must Go Through.' This motto is rooted and grounded in the heart of every Postal Employee.

Taken for Granted
"The average citizen takes the Postal Service for granted giving little, if any, thought to the vast and intricate system that has been set up in order to give him prompt and efficient service. As long as the service operates for him in a normal manner he is satisfied. However, every citizen would have a greater appreciation of the Service if he would familiarize himself with the magnitude of this great institution which serves him daily and of which he owns a part interest. I am justly proud to be a small part of this vast enterprise which is so vital to the success of every business and professional man in Sedalia.

"The complete operations of the Service is administered in Washington, D. C. by the Post Office Department. The Department is headed by the Postmaster General who is a member of the President's Cabinet. His immediate staff includes the Director of the Budget, the Solicitor or the Purchasing Agent. The office of the Purchasing Agent buys every single item of equipment used in the Service from Mail Trucks to twine. The Department is further organized into Four Major Bureaus each headed by an Assistant Postmaster General. In addition to these four major Bureaus there is the Bureau of the Chief Inspector and the Bureau of Accounts.

Some Duties
"The Bureau of the First Assistant Postmaster General is charged with the establishment, organization and maintenance of the Service in General and has supervision over all personnel. The Bureau of the Second Assistant has jurisdiction over all transportation of the mails including the Railway Mail Service, Air transportation and International Postal Service. The Third Assistant has jurisdiction over all transportation of the mails including the Railway Mail Service, Air transportation and International Newspapers and periodicals, stamps, Registry Service, Postal Savings, Parcel Post and Finance. The Bureau of the Fourth Assistant has under its jurisdiction Postoffice Quarters, Motor Vehicle Service, Division of Equipment and supplies, Federal Buildings and Mail Equipment Shops.

"The First Assistant Postmaster General has three deputy assistants and his Bureau is organized into six divisions—Division of Budget and Administrative Services, Division of Post Office Clerical Service, Division of City Delivery Service, Division of Post Office Personnel, Division of Postmasters and Division of Rural Delivery Service. Each of these Divisions is headed by a Director. The Director of the Rural Delivery Service is a former rural carrier who was National President of our Organization. Hon. J. E. Cooper.

"I would like to give you gentlemen a brief summary of the history and growth of the Rural Delivery Service of which I am proud to be a part. The question might arise as to why you as residents of a city would be interested in Rural Mail Delivery but I will venture to assert that every member of this club utilizes the Rural Mail Service regularly in connection with your business or profession. The success of every urban community depends to a large extent on its rural trade territory and the Rural Mails are used extensively in the effort to bring the rural patrons to town.

Rural Delivery Service
"The Rural Delivery Service was instituted in 1896. In this rapidly expanding country there was a definite need of rural postal service. When legislation for this Service was introduced in the House of Representatives there was much opposition from those who feared such a plan would bankrupt the country. However, with an appropriation of $40,000 for its backing, the first experimental rural delivery service was made available from Charlestown, Halltown and Uvilla, West Virginia, effective October 1, 1896. West Virginia was the home state of the Postmaster General at that time, the Honorable William L. Wilson. Each of these routes averaged about 20 miles and each of the five carriers received a yearly salary of $200.00. In the first 9 months there had been established 82 routes from 43 Postoffices in 29 states. By 1903 there were 15,000 rural carriers over the United States. From that humble beginning the Service rapidly expanded and reached its peak in 1925 when there was a total of 45,189 rural routes in the country. At that time, due to constant road improvement and the change in the method of delivery from horse and buggy to automobiles, a program of consolidation of rural routes was instituted. Routes were lengthened in this manner until at the present time the average route length is 45 miles. The 50th anniversary Golden Jubilee of the Rural Delivery Service was celebrated in 1946. The National Rural Letter Carriers' Association held a most impressive memorial service at the grave of the first rural carrier in the United States in the cemetery at Charlestown, West Virginia. As a member of the National Board of Control of this Association it was a high honor and privilege for me to be present at this impressive ceremony. Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, who was then First Assistant gave the memorial address. The Association which has so signally honored me has always held high the noble traditions of the Rural Delivery Service.

Rural Routes
"On January 1, 1949, there were 32,494 rural routes in operation, the rural carriers serving these routes traveling 1,500,000 miles each day and giving complete Postal Service to 30,000,000 rural Americans. Missouri is among the states having the largest number of rural carriers. There are over 1500 rural carriers in this state serving almost half the population of the state. Illinois has the largest number of rural carriers with 1722. Wyoming is the smallest state in which we have an organization with 32 carriers. We do not have an organization in the states of Nevada and Utah there being less than a dozen carriers in each of these states.

"The rural carriers truly operate a 'Postoffice on wheels' bringing every facility of the Postal Service to the farmer's mailbox. He delivers and collects mail, sells stamps, takes applications for money orders, registers letters, insures packages and his daily stops at the familiar rural mail boxes are eagerly awaited by his patrons. The rural carrier enjoys a closer personal relationship with his patrons than any other postal employee. In many instances the farmers use the same make of tires, batteries, chains, automobiles etc. as do their rural carriers as they well know these commodities get a good trial on a rural mail route. In many isolated sections of our country the rural carrier is the only representative of the Government with whom rural people come in contact. To these people the mail man is truly 'The United States Government.' It would surprise you to know the extent in which the advice and counsel of the mail man is sought by rural Americans in many of their more personal affairs. In return it is traditional with the rural service that the mail must go through and the trials and hardships endured by rural carriers in serving their routes during all kinds of weather conditions go hand and hand with the growth of the service. Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

War Services
"During the war the rural carrier extended many special services one of which was to make special trips to the home of a patron, day or night with that fateful message which every loved one of those in the service of their country so dreaded to receive. It was most fitting that these messages beginning with 'we regret to inform you' should be conveyed by one who knew them most intimately, and who was truly a sympathetic friend who had, in most instances, watched their loved one grow to manhood. It was the most painful duty a rural carrier ever performed.

"On November 25, 1947, occurred an event which was unprecedented in all the annals of the history of the Postal Service. First Assistant Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson received a telephone call from the White House. President Truman was on the wire and completely 'floored' Mr. Donaldson by asking him to accept the high post of Postmaster General. It was a tradition that this office should be held by the National Chairman of the political party in power. This action by the President breaking a tradition and appointing a career man as Postmaster General was widely acclaimed all over the Nation and, possibly, received more favorable publicity than any other major appointment had received for a long time. A man who had literally come up through the ranks and who knew more about the Postal Service than possibly any other man was placed in charge of 'this greatest business institutions of the Government. He started in the service by helping his father in a 4th

Competent Postmaster General
"The Department has in Mr. Donaldson, the most competent and efficient Postmaster General in the history of the service. In this connection I want to bring to your attention a matter which is of vital concern to you gentlemen and which you, in the final analysis as co-owners of the service, must decide. The Postoffice Department is the only major branch of the Government which brings in revenue. While the Service was established as a truly Service institution it was deemed necessary to charge certain fees for the various services rendered. This revenue has partly defrayed the cost of the Service and the wisdom of this move has never been denied. However, it has proven to be a source of considerable embarrassment to the Department. There have always been critics who have claimed that the Postal Service should be self-supporting and the Postmaster General has been confronted with this situation many times in asking Congress for the necessary appropriations to run the Department. Postmaster General Donaldson was confronted with the greatest deficit in the history of the Department. This was inevitable for various reasons. The Service has been constantly growing with necessary increasing costs. Express rates had risen sharply throwing a greatly increased volume of parcel post on the Service. Parcel post has always been carried at a great loss. Salaries of all personnel were raised to meet the increased cost of living. Something had to be done. Critics would soon be saying that the affairs of the Department had just as well be in the hands of a politician if a career man who should know all the answers could not keep out of the red. There was just one thing to do and Postmaster General Donaldson placed the solution squarely in the hands of Congress by presenting legislation which would increase postal rates commensurate with the cost of operations. First class letters are the only class of mail which has ever been self supporting. Second class (newspapers and periodicals) third class and parcel post are carried at a real loss. It has been rather amusing to note the complete about face by some of the most powerful critics of the Service. Those who have been clamoring that the Service should be self-supporting are now proudly proclaiming that the Postal Service was established as a Service Institution and should be financed out of the general revenue as are other Departments of the Government. It is for you, the American people to decide. In your thinking you must determine whether the great Postal Service should be a service institution and therefore removed from the burden of completely supporting itself. If you decide it should pay its way then certainly funds or revenue must be provided and this can only be done by a readjustment of postal rates on classes of mail that is carried at a great loss.

"The Postal Service has kept pace with the growth of America. It is necessary to maintain and promote the high ideals it has established and every American citizen should take just pride in this great institution which has played such a vital part in making America truly great."

Dr. J. T. Keeling

The following account of the death of Dr. J. T. Keeling, a former Sedalia, appeared in the August 4, issue of The News Chronicle published in Scott City, Kansas.

"Dr. J. T. Keeling, resident of this city since 1919, died unexpectedly last Thursday evening at his home in this city. He had suffered from a heart ailment the past few years, but it was not thought his condition was serious.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from the Baptist church, by Rev. L. Verne Morris and Rev. H. H. McLeod. Burial was in the Scott county cemetery.

"Dr. Keeling had practiced dentistry in Scott City almost thirty years, retiring about two years ago an account of ill health which it was thought was brought on by hard work during the war period when dentists were scarce and patients came to him from all over western Kansas. He had a wide acquaintance over this area, and often did services for those whom he did not expect would be able to reimburse him.

"Dr. John Talbot Keeling, son of J. A. and Anne Keeling, was born at Fayette, Mo., Dec. 20, 1891. He died at the age of 57 years. When he was a small boy the family moved to Sedalia, Mo., where he graduated from the high school. Later he attended and graduated from the Western Dental college of Kansas City.

"On Dec. 15, 1917 Dr. Keeling was united in marriage to Mildred Theibaud. Two sons and two daughters were born to them. One son, J. D. Keeling, a lieutenant (full grade) in the Navy air corps during the recent war, lost his life when his plane was shot down while attacking a Japanese ship early in 1945.

"Dr. and Mrs. Keeling came to Scott City in 1919 where Dr. Keeling set up offices for the practice of dentistry which he continued until his recent retirement. During his residence here he had been active in varied community interests. Being a star athlete during his own school days, he volunteered in a time of need for the position as coach in the Scott Community high school and developed some star basketball teams, one of which went through the state finals. For a few years he was engaged part time in farming and later was a partner in the building and operation of the concession house at the state park. When Scott City was in dire need of more residences a few years ago, he started an extensive housing project which has greatly relieved the congestion. Since his retirement he has devoted his full time to his properties.

"Dr. Keeling united with the Baptist church years ago, and for several years was a teacher in the Sunday school of the local congregation.

"He is survived by his wife, and his aged mother, Mrs. J. A. Keeling of Scott City; a sister, Mrs. Lucille Adams of Chicago; a son, James D. Keeling of Scott City, two daughters, Mrs. Lance Drake of Denver and Mary Ann of the home, and two grandsons. Mary Ann was not able to be present at the funeral services on account of an injury received while visiting in Colorado."

He had been ill of complications over an extended period but his death was due to a paralytic stroke.

Mr. Allison was born June 30, 1877 at Wytheville, Va., son of Robert and Susan Allison. When he was 18 months of age, his mother died, and with his father, he came to this section of the country where he had made his home the remainder of his life in Cooper county, in the Cotton community. On September 7, 1898 he was married to Ida Baughman.

Earth Shocks In Ecuador

QUITO, Ecuador, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Strong earth shocks were felt last night in already ravaged Ambato, center of the area struck by a series of disastrous earthquakes which began last week.

A radio broadcast from Ambato said the remaining inhabitants of the town were panic-stricken as a few more houses, weakened by previous tremors, collapsed. The broadcast did not say whether there were any new casualties.

Relief forces meanwhile pushed additional supplies into the stricken area, where the government estimates 6,000 persons were killed last week.

Additional tents and canvas were shipped to the region, about 90 miles south of Quito, by truck and plane. The American Red Cross said ten U.S. Airforce transport planes were en route here from the canal zone with tents to house some 3,000 persons.

Truman Says Vaughan Not Be Suspended

"Aroma Of Mystery" Mundt States During Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A fleeting mention of the shipment of a deep freezer to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan created today what Senator Mundt (R-SD) called an "aroma of mystery" in the Senate investigation of "five percenters."

But President Truman told his news conference the frequent mention of his Army aide in the Senate probe had not changed his opinion of Vaughan. He made plain that Vaughan was not going to be suspended, as two other generals have been.

A Milwaukee businessman told the Senators he sent the freezer to Vaughan. It was paid for, said witness Albert J. Gross, by the Albert Verley Co., Chicago perfume manufacturers.

Several other Washingtonians got home freezers paid for by the perfume company, Gross added—and he was stopped at about that point, while Senators and staff members buzzed among themselves.

Halts Line Of Testimony

Chairman Hoey (D-NC) ruled that the special investigating subcommittee didn't know yet whether the freezers were purchases or gifts. He stopped the line of testimony, pending further evidence.

But Mundt, speaking swiftly, already had slipped into the record a remark that it was the "assumption" Vaughan had not paid for his freezer.

Mundt and a fellow Republican, Senator McCarthy (Wis) "reluctantly" agreed to halt the questioning. Mundt complained, however, that Hoey's ruling left "an aroma of mystery."

It was not the only mystery. The Verle company, McCarthy recalled, formerly employed John Maragon, the fabulous former bootblack who visits Vaughan at the White House and has been questioned privately by the committee.

Nor was it the only aroma. As tension heightened in the small and crowded hearing chamber, Senator McCarthy broke it by suggesting the committee staff might try to find Senator Mundt some cigars "with tobacco in them." Mundt joined in the laughter and went on emitting billows of smoke.

Senator Mundt heatedly charged today that a letter written by a War Assets Administration employee to James V. Hunt, in August, 1947, was a "blatant invitation for bribery or connivance of some kind."

Mundt, a member of the Senate investigating subcommittee, spoke out after a committee investigator had read the contents of a letter which he said was written by Clarence W. Oehler to Hunt.

Another letter, told of Oehler obtaining for Hunt match covers with "White House," "H. H. V." and "H. S. T." printed on them.

Hunt, now a Washington business counselor, has been a prime figure in the committee's inquiry into activities of "five percenters"—individuals who seek out government contracts for others for a fee.

The committee investigation previously has developed that Hunt ordered books of match covers bearing the imprint "swiped from Harry S. Truman." Hunt said that he was acting at the request of the White House.

Vaughan's Initials "H. H. V." are the initials of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, whose name figured in the inquiry.

Francis D. Flanagan, committee investigator, said that Oehler was a warehouse specialist for the WAA in the western area at the time he wrote letters to Hunt, formerly a $50-a-day consultant for WAA in Washington.

Oehler, now with the American Industrial Development Corporation of St. Louis, was in the room during Flanagan's testimony.

The committee also planned to take the lid off evidence that led to suspension of the army's chemical corps chief, Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, last July 16.

Flanagan said the correspondence which he read to the committee was taken from Hunt's files.

Mundt's ire was aroused when the investigator read a letter dated Aug. 15, 1947, which referred to an Aug. 7 letter from Hunt to Oehler.

In the letter, Oehler told Hunt of plans to sell in his area automotive parts worth about $100,000 in acquisition value. Oehler wrote that "I will direct the program." He added that "I have carte blanche to sell them now on negotiated or bid or odd lot sale."

The letter said "This is confidential information." Flanagan said the words "confidential information" were underlined. The letter told Hunt "the time is ripe" to get into operation. It went on to say that he thought "can make a good deal procuring these parts."

Mundt then spoke out. He also wanted to know if there was anything in the letter that offers "any justification for a War Assets Administration employee passing along this secret information."

ing that there has been no definite identification of the cause as yet.

Germans Condemn All But Themselves For Their Woes

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Displays of intense nationalism and strident criticism of the Allied occupation have reached a high pitch during the Western German election campaign which reaches its climax Sunday.

The Germans are condemning everyone except themselves for the country's woes. There is an oratorical revolt against allied controls. The international Ruhr authority has been one of the prime objects of attack. So has the reparations program.

German leaders cite the presence in the west of 11,000,000 German refugees from the Polish and Russian zones as a development which the allies have refused to consider in its relationship to cost of government and reparations charges.

The campaign started out on domestic issues—Socialism versus free enterprise, states rights versus centralized government, the extent of federal economic controls, and the like.

The German political leaders for the most part supported the allied stand at the Paris conference ministers which failed to make any progress toward German unification. They wanted no compromise with Russia which might mean any interference or curtailment of the approach to independence promised by their projected new government.

Vilification Intensifies So the Communists rallied at the other parties as dividers of Germany and called them collaborators.

To squelch this, the leaders of all major parties began to prove their freedom to criticize the allies. The vilification, it seems to me, has been permitted to reach a pitch far beyond what is technically allowed under the occupation rules. The German leaders who profess to be on "our side" have come pretty close to the British once jailed Max Reimann, the Communist leader.

Britain and France have taken most of the punishment. More prudence has been displayed regarding the U. S. which makes food shipments and other concessions.

General Praises Bomber

Can go Anywhere And do Anything As a Combat Plane, House Group Told

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Gen. George C. Kenney said today the B-36 bomber "can go anywhere and do anything as a combat plane."

Once one of the toughest foes of the big plane, Kenney gave it this high praise before the House Armed Services committee:

"As a night bomber, operating over 40,000 feet, it is perfectly safe to take it anywhere. Nobody has a fighter plane that could touch it."

The stubby, gray-haired Air Force pioneer was a wartime allied air commander in the Pacific.

He told his story to the committee after it heard former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson take "full responsibility" for a pre-test order of 100 B-36s given in 1943 to get production rolling as quickly as possible.

Air Officer Since 1917

An air officer since 1917 and now Commander of the Air University at Maxwell Field, Ala., Kenney said his first contact with the B-36 was in 1941, when he recommended that the Air Force buy it.

This decision, he said was based on preliminary drawings and plans submitted by four airplane manufacturers. Kenney was then Chief of Procurement in the Air Materiel Command at Wright Field, Ohio.

He said he was impressed with the information that the B-36 bomber could carry a 10,000-pound bomb load 10,000 miles without refueling.

Patterson said he could recall quite clearly the day the order was placed for the 100 B-36s.

"Tom Girdler, president of Consolidated, came in to see me," Patterson said. "He asked me how long the war would last. I said I didn't know."

Difficulty Getting Subcontractors "He then asked me: 'Do you want the B-36 in the war?'"

"I told him: 'I certainly do,'" Patterson related that Girdler explained that he was having difficulty in getting subcontractors to provide needed parts for the big plane, and asked:

Patterson said he consulted with Air Force heads and "then and there gave him the order for 100 B-36s."

Asked by committee counsel, Joseph B. Keenan, if any of his decisions regarding the B-36 were "motivated in any way" by the ownership of the Consolidated concern, Patterson replied:

"Not in the slightest. I didn't have the faintest notion who had financial interest in Consolidated. I hadn't met Girdler until that day in 1943."

Approved on Merits Kenney said he approved the B-36 plans "solely on the merits of design." This, he declared, was "the only consideration."

He said he next met the B-36 when he returned from the Pacific after the war and was given command of the Strategic Air Command in late 1946. He immediately began to inquire about the plane, which still had not flown.

Kenney said that "the plane didn't seem to be living up to expectations."

It was having "a lot of teething troubles," with propellers, the flap system, landing gear and engines, and these "were very alarming to me," he added.

Recommended Spaatz Kenney said he recommended to Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, then Air Force Commander, that the B-36 program be reviewed and perhaps curtailed.

By June, 1948, however, most of the plane's troubles had been licked, Kennedy said, adding:

"The airplane astonished me, and I think astonished everybody else. The youngsters flying it said they liked it, and with all the troubles cured, I said 'All right, I'll buy it.'"

Patterson told the committee he was not motivated by interest in any of the individuals connected with the Consolidated Aircraft company, which builds the B-36.

Gifts of Freezers Reported

By Marvin L. Arrowsmith
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—Mrs. Harry S. Truman and Chief Justice Vinson were reported today to have been sent home freezers by a company figuring in the Senate's five percent inquiry.

The White House officially denied any knowledge of the matter.

Vinson said he'll let the facts come out in the course of the congressional investigation.

But for the moment, the investigation raced down another track.

It brought a charge by Senator Mundt (R-S.D.) that President Truman's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, appeared to have entered into an "ingenious plot" to "cut the throats" of eight officers in the running for a top army job.

Vaughan Silent

Vaughan so far has been silent. But word at the White House today was that he indicated he is ready to be sworn and testify before the committee whenever it wants to hear him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—Senator Hoey (D-N.C.) said today Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's Army aide, has indicated his willingness to testify in the Senate "five percent" hearings.

Hoey, chairman of the committee conducting the inquiry did not say when Vaughan would be called.

Hoey made the statement to reporters at the White House. General Vaughan has indicated his willingness to testify before the committee at any time the committee wants to hear him," Hoey said.

The committee is looking into the activities of the so-called five-percenters—persons who seek out government contracts for others at a fee.

Vaughan's name has entered the hearing on several counts—mainly as a reported close friend of James V. Hunt, former army officer, surplus property sales consultant and more recently a management counselor.

Today the committee heard testimony that Hunt's secretary delivered to Vaughan's office in the White House last spring a memorandum from Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt on the fitness of certain army officers to succeed Waitt as army chemical corps chief.

No Replacement

No replacement was made at the time.

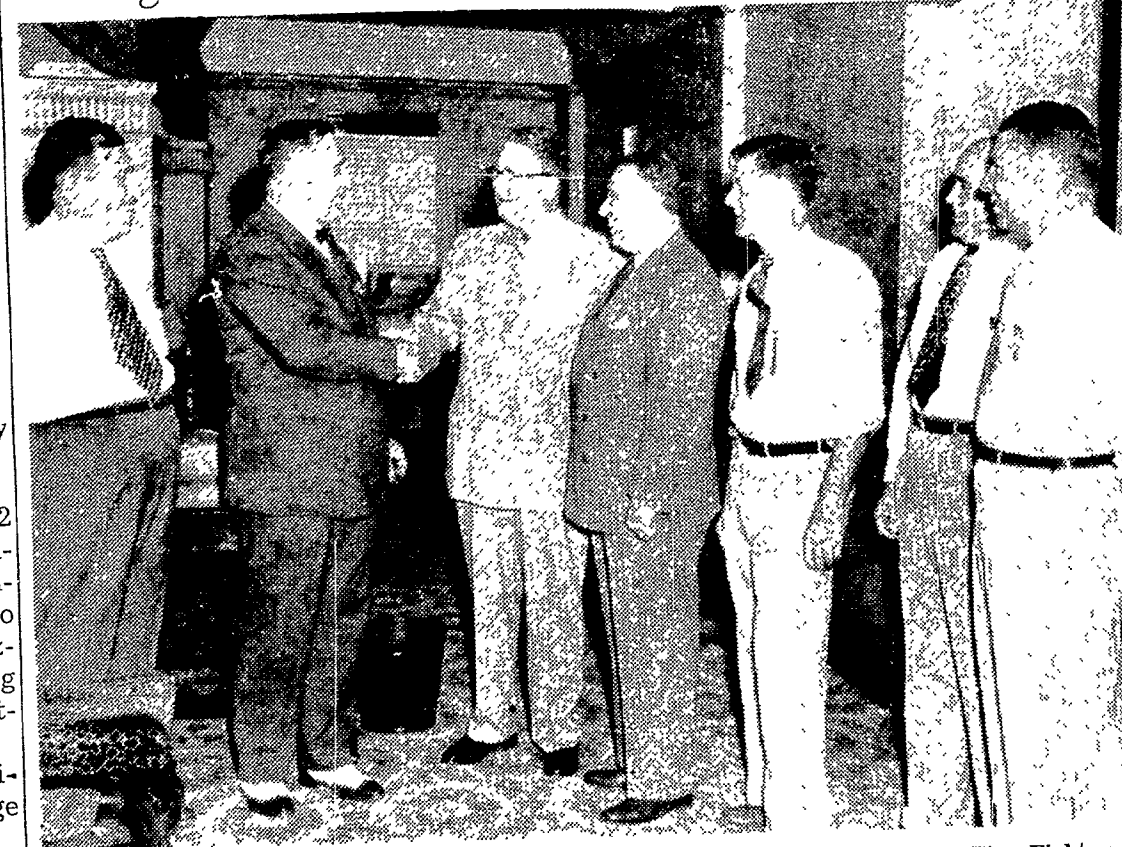

Waitt on July 16 was suspended as chemical chief by Secretary of the army Gordon Gray, along with Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, quartermaster general.

Gray said in a statement that the senate inquiry had turned up evidence "which indicates that General Waitt improperly furnished personnel data to an individual not in the military service and who was not entitled to receive such data."

On July 7, Miss Mildred Ortmeier, Hunt's secretary, testified to committee and army investigators that Waitt dictated a memorandum to her entitled "Eligible

Void Law Requiring Officials To Believe in Christianity

UPPER MARLBORO, Md., Aug. 12.—(P)—A 95-year-old Maryland law requiring officials to swear to belief in the Christian religion has been declared invalid.

Circuit court judge Charles C. Marbury made the ruling yesterday, as a result, J. Milton Stanford, Brentwood town councilman elect will be allowed to take office despite his religious beliefs.

Stanford is a Pantheist—one who believes the universe is God but who does not accept the doctrine of a future state of rewards and punishments.

He had refused to take the oath of office when he learned it contained a sentence "I believe in the Christian religion." The town council had refused to seat him.

Judge Marbury's ruling was on Stanford's suit to force the council to permit him to take office.

Marbury said that, although the law has been on the books since 1854, he doubts whether the state legislature has any right to force a public official to declare that he believes in God.

Missourians Are Invited to Come Home

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 12.—(P)—"All is forgiven."

Gov. Forrest Smith sent a telegram today to Walla Walla, Wash., urging former Missourians there to come back home.

The wire was sent at the request of the Walla Walla Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of an all states picnic there next Sunday.

Here is the text of the message: "To those who have, for one reason or another, strayed away from this great state, I want to tell you all is forgiven and if you will return within the very near future you will be received with open arms."

"Missouri was never prettier at this time of year than it is now. We have had more than the usual amount of rain and the countryside is a bright green. It is drawing near when the Ozarks will be turned into a splash of bright colors. I need not tell you what Missouri is like in October—the most beautiful place in the world."

"But to those of you who choose to remain in the equally fine state of Washington I send you greetings and best wishes for continued happiness and success."

Hay Fever Sufferer

Governor Smith probably is looking forward to October more eagerly than most folks. A chronic hay fever sufferer, the governor has been looking at the next month and a half—and his ragweed pollen—with more than a little concern.

Second Case of Polio in Cooper County

BOONVILLE, Mo., Aug. 12.—(P)—Cooper county's second case of polio this summer was reported today.

Sam Cramer, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cramer, of near here, is in a Boonville hospital with the disease. He is reported in a satisfactory condition.

Rep. Cotton Suggests Changes For Both Political Parties

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—Rep. Cotton (R-NH) thinks the country would be better off if the Democrats were "a little less slap-happy" and the Republicans "a little more alive."

He said so in a letter to his constituents.

To illustrate what he meant, he described two Washington functions he attended. One was a party given by Rep. Boykin (D-Ala.) honoring House Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.). The other was a Republican national committee dinner to start the 1950 political campaign.

Cotton said the party for Rayburn was a "sumptuous affair" but "I couldn't help but feel that a little less hilarity and a little more dignity" were called for.

Of the GOP "kickoff" dinner, he said: "They were certainly solemn enough. In fact they had all the buoyant enthusiasm and confidence that Lebanon (N.H.) high school would have in kicking off against Notre Dame."

"For the main speaker they resurrected Will Hayes, chairman of the party in 1920, who droned on about the good old days."

"At about 10:30 we dried our tears and went home."

Convention of Mo. Firemen In Session Here

President of International Assn. Speaks

Firemen from the state of Missouri met at the Bothwell hotel this morning at 10:00 o'clock to open the seventh annual convention of the Missouri State Council of Fire Fighters, which will last two days closing Saturday night.

All members of Local 823 I.A.F.F., representing the Sedalia Fire Department were in attendance, excepting those who have the duty for the day.

John P. Redmond, president, International Association of Fire Fighters of Washington, D. C.; William D. Buck, vice-president of St. Louis and Richard Zammar, of Kansas City, who is president of the Missouri fire fighters are here for the convention.

Rev. H. U. Campbell, pastor of the Fifth Street Methodist church, gave the opening invocation. Mayor Julian H. Bagby was on hand to welcome the convention group, and indicated that he wanted them to have a good time while in Sedalia, and hoped they would return to this city on other occasions.

Many Women Present
Mr. Buck, during his acceptance of Mayor Bagby's welcoming address, said he had never seen such a wonderful turnout of the ladies, who accompanied their husbands to this convention.

The remainder of the morning and part of this afternoon was spent in the regular order of business, roll call of officers, and delegates, appointments of committees and announcements.

After lunch, movies were shown at the hotel by Jack Shoemaker.

In addition to being the president of International Association of Fire Fighters, Mr. Redmond served in all ranks from private to division fire marshal as a member of the Chicago Fire Department. He spent 18 years as vice president of International Association before being elected president. He is a member of the Dust Explosion Hazard Committee of the National Fire Protection Association.

On Council
He is a member of the advisory fireways council committee and is on the original committee of President Truman's conference on Fire Prevention and a member of the continuation committee of the President's conference on fire prevention. He has recently been appointed by the United States Government and just returned as a labor advisor to the International Labor Organization Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland.

In his afternoon speech, Mr. Redmond spoke on observations abroad and the activities of the International Labor Organization, while serving as a member on the committee.

He related his observations of the labor advisory to European and Asia conference submitted to ECA on July 5 and 6.

A report was made by A. S. Phillips, an attorney of St. Louis, following the main address of the afternoon.

The fireman and their accompanying wives, wound up the first day's convention with a banquet held at the Old Missouri Homestead.

The convention group will convene tomorrow morning at 10:00 a. m.

Fire on Sixth Floor of J. C. Missouri Hotel

Woman Rescued; One Guest Dies Of Heart Attack

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 12.—(P)—A woman was rescued from a sixth floor window ledge of the Missouri hotel early today as a fire damaged four or five rooms of the hotel.

One guest, A. F. Noecker, about 65, Clayton, Mo., died of a heart attack during the excitement.

The fire was discovered about 2:45 a. m. in a sixth floor room. Hotel employees first sought to extinguish the flames and then called the fire department.

Firemen put an 85 foot ladder to her perch and Fireman John Grisham climbed up and brought her down.

Enroute to Illinois

Mrs. Barnhouse was enroute to Ottawa, Ill., to visit relatives. She had arrived a short time before the fire from Pittsburg, Kas., where she had attended the funeral of another relative.

Edward Shehee, manager of the hotel, said the fire broke out in a sixth floor room occupied by F. J. Green of St. Louis, a venetian blind salesman.

Shehee said Green told him he woke up and found his hair was on fire and "flames were all around him." He gave the alarm and fled. He was not seriously burned but the room was gutted.

No Immediate Estimate

Several adjoining rooms and the hallway were charred. Shehee could not estimate the damage immediately.

He said all the sixth floor rooms were occupied but all the guests got out safely.

Noecker, 61, collapsed in the lobby when the fire broke out. Other guests thought he had fainted but a doctor pronounced him dead, probably of a heart attack caused by the excitement.

Heavy Loss

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 12.—(P)—N. M. Chapman of Shreveport, La., told the Associated Press he and his wife lost about $2,500 in money and jewelry in a hotel fire here early today.

Chapman, a hosiery company operator, said he and his wife managed to get out of their Missouri hotel room by wrapping wet bath towels around their heads and walking half-dressed down two floors from the smoke and flame filled portion of the sixth floor.

He said they tried two or three times to leave by the hall door. Each time the smoke and heat got worse. They used the towels at his wife's suggestion and walked over the then flaming corridor carpet to get to the stairway.

Way to Fire Escape
After descending several floors, he said, they made their way to the fire escape, then to the top of a kitchen annex. Firemen helped them to the ground, Chapman said.

A doctor was required to help Mrs. Chapman who suffered from the smoke, the husband said.

After returning to their room, he went on, he found Mrs. Chapman's jeweled wrist watch on the floor. But she reported loss of one ring worth $2,000 and two others of lesser value. Also lost, Chapman said, was his wallet containing $142 in cash and his wrist

Possibility of Marriage Has Not Been Discussed, Said V-P

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—Vice President Barkley said today he has not even discussed the possibility of marriage with Mrs. Carlton S. Hadley, St. Louis.

"There will be no wedding?" he was asked.

"No, sir," he replied.

Pressed as to whether he would be in a wedding as a best man or otherwise, he said:

"No, sir, this thing is getting funny."

Asked pointblank whether he will marry Mrs. Hadley, Barkley said:

"I can say that the matter has never been discussed, even on the fringes, between us. I am trying to protect a very charming woman from rumors or even deductions."

Asked whether he would be in a wedding in Paducah, Ky., tomorrow.

The vice president, emerging from a cabinet session, told White House reporters:

"The matter of a wedding has never been mentioned or discussed, even on the fringes, between us."

Barkley described Mrs. Hadley, with whom he attended a baseball game last weekend as "a very lovely and charming woman." But he specifically denied that there would be a wedding in Paducah, Ky., tomorrow.

Bicycle-Auto Collision; Boy Sprains Wrist

Accident Occurs On Ohio Avenue About 1:00 O'clock

A bicyclist escaped serious injuries shortly after 1:00 o'clock this afternoon, when he was knocked down from his bicycle, thrown upon the hood of an automobile, and finally slid down the front fender, landing in the center of Ohio avenue in the 100 block.

He is Phillip Lucas, about 15, of 415 North Engineer avenue. He was taken to the Bothwell hospital in a police car, where an X-ray picture was taken. His only injury reported was a sprained wrist.

Billy Lane, a salesman of Cincinnati, Ohio, who was an eye witness gave the following account of the accident: He said three bicyclists were traveling south on Ohio avenue, and Lucas in an attempt to go around a truck, hit the on-coming car dead center. Lane said he heard Lucas yell to the other boys on their bicycles, "Watch me go around this truck."

Another Eye Witness
Amos H. Rehmer of Florence, another eye witness verified Mr. Lane's account of the accident.

The bicycle was twisted and torn apart at the fork, and was wrecked beyond repair. The automobile, which was involved in the accident was a 1947 Dodge coach, driven by Clay Schroeder of near Beaman. A dent in dead center of the grill, and a few scratches was the extent of damage to the car.

The police were at the scene directing traffic and keeping order in the large crowd which assembled. They did not make any arrests.

Springfield Fair Opens Saturday

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 12.—(P)—Missouri's second largest fair opens here tomorrow for a week-long program.

Exceeded only by the State fair at Sedalia in state agricultural exhibitions, the Ozarks Empire fair expects an attendance of nearly 200,000 persons this year. The exposition last year played to nearly 170,000.

The fair already is assured of one new record—entries in livestock divisions now total 1,402, last year 1,339 animals were entered.

To Be His Guests
"I'm going to Paducah tomorrow to participate in the dedication of an airport to be named Barkley field," he said.

"There will be no wedding?" he was asked.

"No, sir," he replied.

Pressed as to whether he would be in a wedding as a best man or otherwise, he said:

"No, sir, this thing is getting funny."

Asked pointblank whether he will marry Mrs. Hadley, Barkley said:

Counter Charges By GOP

Reply to Truman's Assertion That Filibusters Are Delaying Many Bills

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12

—(P)—President Truman's assertion that Republican filibusters are delaying money bills in the Senate brought GOP counter charges today that the Democrats are stalling Congress' adjournment.

Senator Morse (R-Ore.) told a reporter he thinks there is a Democratic plot to keep Congress in session and thereby keep Republican lawmakers off the stump this fall.

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, retorted that this is "only a figment of the Senator's imagination."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the GOP floor leader, and Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of his party's policy committee, took issue with the president on the money bill question.

Wherry called reporters together to tell them his belief that Mr. Truman, in complaining at delays, was actually reflecting on the Democratic leadership.

The president made his filibuster-delay statement at a news conference yesterday.

Senator Taft said forcefully that there hasn't been any Republican filibuster.

"There has been no filibuster by Republicans on any bill," Taft declared. "We have consistently fought increases made by the Democratic appropriations committee and there have been so many of these that there have been delays."

"The Republican 80th Congress approved all appropriations bills by June 15 last year. The Democratic leadership of the 81st can't escape responsibility for the fact that there still are two basic bills which haven't even been brought up for Senate consideration."

Lucas said the Senate will take up the Interior department appropriations bill today after a decision is reached on the so-called basing point bill.

The huge $14,800,000,000 Armed Services bill seems unlikely to get Senate action before Monday.

Taft noted that the $5,797,000,000 Foreign Aid bill passed by the Senate was delayed by a point of order by Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, which sent it back to committee for several days.

On the adjournment front, Morse told a reporter he thinks there is a definite move afoot among administration Democrats to delay quitting so that GOP members seeking reelection won't have much time to campaign this year.

"They know that some of us, like Senator Taft of Ohio, Senator Donnell of Missouri and myself are pretty vigorous campaigners and I think they want to hamstring us as much as they can," Morse said.

lash On Arms Aid Defeated

Foreign Affairs Committee Of House In Tie Vote On Issue

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11

—(P)—The administration defeated, by a hair-margin, an attempt to cut in half its arms aid program for Western Europe. The House foreign affairs committee was reported to have 8-8 with nine absentees.

The committee automatically rejects an amendment.

Chairman Kee (D-WVa.) told reporters after the closed session that the major amendments were disposed of.

He said he hopes that the full act requested by President Truman—1,450,000,000 for Western Europe and other nations—will be approved probably by the end of the month.

Richards (D-Sc.) offered amendment to authorize $95,000 for arms aid to European members of the North Atlantic Alliance. The bill carries $990,000 for that purpose.

Richards amendment bore similarity to the idea advanced Tuesday by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.). Vandenberg cut down the amount of aid to be appropriated for Western Europe in this session of Congress by the amount proposed by Richards.

Richards amendment is with a large segment of congressional opinion which has developed from the first that the arm needs revision. On the hand, the administration insists it is the bare minimum to "fill the vacuum" of European weakness and help defenses against Russian aggression.

Defeat at the Polls Did Not End Hoover's Public Life

By Bruce Bissatt

Herbert Hoover's attainment of his 75th birthday marks the finish of a long, useful public life for the former Republican president.

He made that milestone the final one himself. There's no telling what public chores might still fall to him were he willing to go on serving a little longer.

Hoover may well confound future historians,
for he resists easy cataloguing. His is a career
of contradictions.

In the years after his defeat in 1932 at the hands of the late President Roosevelt, Hoover
probably was one of the most severely maligned
chief executives in U. S. history. To listen to his Democratic detractors, one would have thought we had never seen a worse president. He became the symbol of the Great Depression.

Yet Historian Arthur M. Schlesinger reports
that a poll of historians on the relative stature
of American presidents placed Hoover in the "average" group rather than with the poor or below average. Only 10 were rated above average.

Hoover, the depression president, was the same man who had first touched the public imagination by his handling of world food and relief problems during and after World War I.
In those days the label "humanitarian" was often attached to him. It was seldom used in the 1930's.

President Roosevelt did not see fit to make use of Hoover's evident talent for organizational problems. But President Truman did. He returned the aging Californian to public service
in 1945 by ordering him to make a 2-months'
survey of famine stricken peoples in Europe
and elsewhere.

Then Mr. Truman chose Hoover to head a new commission on government reorganization.
The Republicans' elder statesman pitched in to make the job his crowning, final public duty—
a labor of love. For he believes strongly in
the need for economies gained through streamlining the sprawled out federal government of today.

By now all America knows that the Hoover
commission undertook the most gigantic reshaping of government agencies in world history.
No matter in what degree its recommendations
are carried out, it will have left its permanent
mark on American life.

Thus Hoover has stamped his personality and character on the nation. But what has happened to him meantime? Did his humiliation
in depression times scar him deeply? He would be less than human if it did not.

Still, the jobs he has since held in public service must have gone far toward compensat-
ing him. They are proof of his courage in rising above crushing defeat. They are proof,
too, of a genuine desire for public service beyond any normal call of duty.

Best of all, Hoover has demonstrated what an
ex-president can do if he is determined to be useful and not to be thrown into the discard.

How About 'Longest Trial?'

A reporter noted that a certain woman who testified in the New York trial of 11 Communist leaders was the "tallest witness" yet to appear on the stand.

It's that kind of a case. Inevitably, one of these days there'll be a report on the "shortest witness" and then perhaps "the first witness
with a goatee," and so on.

The trial has run six months now and forecasts for another half year. So it wouldn't be too upsetting if some enterprising merchant
should offer a handsome door prize to the first spectator through the courtroom portals on the 250th day of the proceedings.

Dark Outlook for White House

The White House architect says it may take
two years to make the President's home safe to live in again. If that gloomy forecast proves accurate, President Truman may go down in history as the chief executive who spent less time in the White House than any other twotermer on record.

Than any since John Adams, that is, for he was the first president to live there. Possibly Governor Dewey wouldn't have been so eager
for Truman's job if he'd known it meant living
in modest Blair House instead of the fabled
white mansion across the street.

Quirino's Visit Causes Diplomatic Headache in Washington

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—Philippine President Elpidio Quirino received the customary formal amenities during his Washington visit
but, privately, top officials breathed a sigh of relief when he departed.

Reason was a gingerly handled situation that astonished and embarrassed them.

Three leading members of Quirino's party
were prominent Jap collaborators and violent U.
S. denouncers. They are:

Jose Yulo, chief justice of the supreme court in the Jap-created puppet government. Yulo was personally decorated by Emperor Hirohito for outstanding services to Japan. Yulo is now a member of Quirino's Council of State.

Federico Mangahas, zealous supporter of the Japs and ghost writer of virulently anti-American speeches for top Filipino collaborators. Mangahas is now Quirino's private secretary.

Vicente Albano Pacis, leading collaborationist
propagandist who poured out a steady stream
of anti-American fulminations in the press and
party.

President Quirino, personally, has an inpec-cable resistance record. His wife and other members of his family were killed by the Japs because of his steadfast refusal to collaborate. Friends explain the presence of the three collaborators in his party as due to "political necessity."

Quirino is seeking re-election this year in a very uncertain race. His leading opponent is Jose P. Laurel, who was president of the Jap puppet government. Despite his extreme collaborationist record, including a declaration of war against the U. S., Laurel was freed from prison in an amnesty proclaimed by his close friend and fellow collaborationist, the late President Manuel Roxas. Another strong candidate opposing Quirino is Jose Avelino, wily Tammany-
type politician.

Quirino's friends say his three collaborationist
associates are giving important help in his re-election campaign. This is particularly true of Yulo, credited with being one of the smartest business-men and best money-raisers in the Philippines. Yulo is an intimate of Ambassador Joaquin M. Elizalde, who has represented his country in Washington off and on for a number of years. Elizalde is rated as the wealthiest man in the Philippines.

In Filipino circles it is claimed one reason
for Quirino's visit was to promote a U. S.
loan to Elizalde's extensive business interests.

Washington officials were particularly annoyed at the presence of the three collaborationists
because of lack of enthusiasm about the whole idea of Quirino's visit. The plan originated with his campaign managers. They conceived it as a smart campaign maneuver. The official invitation was extended reluctantly and only after much wire-pulling.

Finders Keepers

Washington state's Senators Warren G. Magnuson, D., and Harry Cain, R., are at bitter
loggerheads over the Tacoma postmastership.
Tacoma is Cain's home town and he is demanding the appointment for one of his adherents, William E. Patrick, former Army
colonel. Magnuson is just as insistently supporting John MacMonagle, disabled veteran who has been acting postmaster for four years.

Cain took the controversy directly to Magnuson, saying, "I thought a senator had the right to recommend the postmaster for his home town?"

"Perhaps so, in some cases," retorted Magnuson, "but in this case there are two strikes, against you. One is that my man was originally recommended by the congressman of his district
and he has strong support in Tacoma. The other strike is that you Republicans are not in control this year as you were last. That makes a big difference, and that is why my man will get the appointment."

Unemployment Figures

Accuracy of the Census Bureau's last 4,100-000 unemployment report is sharply questioned
by the Public Affairs Institute. According to

Anderson also sharply challenges Commerce
Secretary Sawyer's contention that increase in unemployment is due largely to the influx of young new workers looking for jobs. Anderson
says the statistics don't bear that out.

"A comparison of changes in the labor force
during May-June," he declares, "shows that 800,000 fewer young people became active job
seekers this year than during the same period
last year. The official unemployment figures are not realistic. Large numbers of jobless are not being taken into consideration for various technical reasons that don't hold water on examination."

Flashes

Senator Charles Tobey, R., N. H., wept openly
during the Labor Committee hearing on the bill
for federal aid in the fight against multiple sclerosis. One of the witnesses was Mrs. Lou Gehrig, widow of the baseball star who died
of the disease . . . Secretaries Dean Acheson
and Louis Johnson warmly assured the Foreign Relations Committee there is no ill feeling between them over military meddling in foreign policy . . . Rhode Island Democrats are trying to persuade Thomas G. Corcoran, onetime top
New Deal brain-truster, to re-enter the political arena. He has given no indication that he is interested.

California Not So Strange

While Southern California continues to attract
new people by the thousands, many a visitor
professes not to like what he sees there.

To some, the informal mode of dress is shock-
ing. To others, the free-ranging architecture, usually translated into dazzling white stucco, is the chief offender. These and other elements make a pattern of restlessness that seems strange.

Actually it isn't strange at all. Californians more often than not are people from other states who are just doing out there what they are afraid to do at home in Iowa or Georgia or
New York.

Early Polio Symptoms Vary Deceptively
Among Victims

Written for NEA Service

The most important step in combating poliomyelitis is to make
the diagnosis as soon as possible so
that treatment can be begun
promptly. This is particularly difficult because the first symptoms often resemble those of an ordinary cold or mild infection.
Paralysis does not set in for several days as a rule.

No two patients who contract
polio show exactly the same symptoms. The best results from treatment, therefore, require judgment, skill, and experience in order to choose those methods best suited to the particular victim.
Not only is medical care important, but good nursing, physical therapy and other treatments are necessary to get the best results.

Hospitals Well Equipped

Many hospitals are now well equipped to handle patients with polio. Much of this has been made possible by the funds made available to them through the National Foundation for Infantile
Paralysis, to which so many generous-hearted citizens throughout the country have contributed.

The muscular paralysis which
comes on after the first few days
of the disease is accompanied by painful muscle spasms. These can be greatly relieved by hot wet
packs, properly applied and by nursing care. The skin tenderness which is also so common is also helped by such treatments.

At the time when the disease
is acute every effort has to be made to keep the muscles in the best possible condition so that they will respond to the later treatments and training. Bed rest is,
needless to say, important as are
the other measures like plenty of fluids which are used for any infectious disease.

Medical science is constantly investigating the methods of treatment used for polio and trying to devise better ones. Several drugs and many other methods have a place in the treatment of the acute illness. As yet, however, a sure cure for all victims of the disease
has not been discovered.

Note: Dr. Jordan is unable to answer individual questions from readers. However, each day he will answer one of the most frequently asked questions in his column.

THE DOCTOR ANSWERS

By Edwin P. Jordan, M. D.

QUESTION: Is it true that parents who have brown
eyes cannot have a child
with blue eyes?

ANSWER: This statement
is not true. Many people with brown eyes carry a gene or hereditary factor for blue eyes. It is thoroughly possible, and indeed has happened many times, that two brown-eyed parents
will have only blue-eyed children.

Bringing up Children is Work
--Surprising as it May Seem

It's really amazing how many mothers today want the prestige
of motherhood and yet are resentful of its demands.

"All I hear all day long is
'Mommy this' and 'Mommy that,'"
they complain. Yet if a woman
wants to have children—what else
can she expect to hear all day long?

"The house seems to be in a mess all the time. It just seems as though you can't keep a house
looking half-way decent when you've got children." Of course,
you can't. Just from looking at
her friends' houses any bride
ought to figure that out before
she has children of her own.

"I'm so tired down sometimes
I think I'll go crazy." Why should
that come as a surprise to any woman? A child tires a woman down completely until he's of school age—there's no secret about that. And he tires her down to a lesser degree until he's at least of high school age.

"When John gets home at 6 o'clock he's through. But I can't sit down and relax until the children are bathed and put to bed." Well, Grandma could have told
any modern wife those facts of life. Don't she have a saying that goes something like: "A man works from sun to sun but a woman's work is never done?"

Better Resign Yourself, Mom

"It's always something. Last month they all had colds. And now
I've got to start taking them to town for their dental check-ups." And it will always be something.

Where there are children, there
are worries—and a woman might as well resign herself to it philosophically, instead of complaining.

Bringing up children is a long
row to hoe. It always has been and it always will be. So it's a little surprising that so many young mothers don't seem to expect it to be tough when they take on the job, or that they act so resentful once they find out that it is.

Apparently the modern girl knows all the facts of life except
the important one that children
are a lot of trouble for a good many years.

• REFUGE

THE STORY: A wealthy widow,
Mrs. Everson, has fled with her servants in two giant trailers to
"a place of safety" from atomic
bombs, which she believes will rain in a war that is impending.
In the party are Mrs. Malone,
cook and housekeeper; the Mar-
chese Dellaanna, Mrs. Everson's companion; Rudy, the handsome chuffeur; and Victor, the house-
boy. Mrs. Everson tells Mrs. Malone that they will have to remain here, in the canyon country,
for several months and that the
radio will inform them of the end
of civilization in atomic warfare.
But just before a dinner celebrating their arrival, Mrs. Malone notices the air is still and stuffy,
"as if a gigantic shape had passed
between the earth and sun" and the air is still and quiet. Nothing stirs.

XXI

RUDY and Victor were unloading the truck. Crates, barrels, metal cylinders, batteries, boxes
were stacked in the sand.

Mrs. Everson seemed to be supervising the job. She sat on one of the crates, displaying her beautiful legs, and checked off the supplies on a typewritten list.

When Victor came into the kitchen at 5 o'clock, he seemed morose. Mrs. Everson, he said,
had decided that all the stuff must
be re-loaded in the morning and hauled out of the river-bed into
the forest. The big trailer would be shifted, too. Mrs. Malone wondered why.

Victor was very tired.

"Strange weather," he said. "It makes my head ache, and I have a pain behind my eyes."

"Maybe it's happened!" Mrs.
Malone cried.

Her heart seemed to catch, to stumble, to turn over.

"No," Victor said. "I thought of that. The radio is just as usual.
Bob Hope is on. The audience is
laughing and whistling!"

Dinner was ready to serve at 7 o'clock, but Mrs. Everson was 10 minutes late. When she appeared she was dressed as if for

a state banquet or an opening night at the opera.

She wore a dress made of pale
gold lace, cut very low to display
her smooth, strong shoulders. Her hair had been brushed and burnished; she had twisted it into a sort of one-sided coronet, a barbaric ornament in itself.

Around her throat, descending
in three strands across the splendor of her breast was a necklace
of square emeralds. Diamond and emerald bracelets clasped both
arms, so that with every gesture
she seemed to scatter sparks. Her feet were lightly shod in gilt sandals, the toes bare and enameled,
the heels tinted.

VICTOR, returning with the service plates, reported Mrs.
Everson's magnificence to Mrs.
Malone.

"Try to see, if you can! There they sit, conversing, as if they were in Paris or New York. She has half a million in jewels on
her fingers!"

He struck his forehead with the back of his hand.

"Her perfume, Malone! It smells
of ginger flowers and sandalwood
and jasmine. All for what?"

"Maybe Rudy—? Here, the soup . . ."

Later Victor brought a compliment:

"She says the ragout is excellent."

"It's not a ragout," Mrs. Malone said sharply. She felt dizzy and ill-tempered. The heat out-of-doors had penetrated the trailer
in spite of the cooling system. "I cooked the rabbit the way the French cook Belgian hare, with wine and spices. But she wouldn't know the difference."

A MOMENT later she heard the festive pop of a champagne
cork.

"They are drinking toasts," Victor reported. "To her. To our arrival. To the future. She is very excited about something. Her eyes are on fire. Her hand trembles."

"Maybe tomorrow . . ." Mrs.
Malone began.

"Maybe tonight!" Victor said.

At last the meal was over, the
dishes washed and put away. Mrs.
Everson and the Marchese sat with little silver-lustre cups, sipped
black coffee as thick as syrup and smoked; and listened to Pinza singing "Mattinata," to Trenet, to a magnificent recording of "Le Sacre du Printemps."

The cloying humidity made Mrs.
Malone's uniform cling to her body. She changed into a clean
dress before going back to the small trailer for her own dinner.

As she stepped outside, she felt
the blackness of the night like an enfoldng and smothering blanket.
She stood for a moment in the absolute dark, listening.

The music came faintly from inside the trailer, and once she heard Mrs. Everson's laughter,
deep-throated, cruel.

It was strange, but as she stood
there Mrs. Malone could sense the great wall of mountains beyond
the forest. It seemed to her that she could comprehend their substance, their form, the processes
of their evolution.

The deep pressures at the core of the earth, gathering to resist the blow that was about to fall. The unimaginable atoms, molecules, geological structures about to be torn from their ancient orbit.

Would the mountain rampart stand? Or would there be a finality for all things? A world of red-hot rock, without atmosphere,
dead . . .

Prospective Bumper Crops May Cut Prices

July Survey Shows Price Level Some Above Parity

By Ovid A. Martin
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—The price advantage farmers have enjoyed since late 1941 may turn into a disadvantage within a few months.

So predicted agriculture department economists today as they eyed prospective bumper crops to be harvested in the fall and a sharply increasing supply of pork due to hit butcher shops in a month or so.

These seasonally increasing supplies of farm products are expected to pull down prices of many products.

The department has a standard for measuring farm prices. This standard is called "parity." When prices are at the level of this standard, they are deemed to be equally fair to the farmer and those who buy his products.

A July price survey showed the farm price level to be two per cent above this parity or "fair" standard. That meant that, on the basis of this measuring system, farmers had a slight advantage over users of his products.

Consumer Had Best of It
In the decade before the war, the consumer had all the better of it. Farm prices averaged below parity — in fact, down to 50 per cent of parity in 1933. The war, with its increased demand for food, pulled farm prices upward. In December, 1941, the farmers' long disadvantage turned into a slight advantage. Month by month the farmers' favorable position grew and grew, until price ceilings brought halt. But removal of price controls after the war permitted further increases.

By October, 1946, farmers' prices reached a record peak of 33 percent above the parity level. Then as postwar world shortages began to disappear, farm prices started downward.

Last Month's Level Low
Last month's level is the lowest since December, 1941. Officials expect prices to fall below the parity point by late fall if present crop production prospects are borne out.

Some products have been selling for much less than parity for months, particularly grains, potatoes, dairy products, eggs, cotton and oilseeds. These products have been bringing less than the so-called fair level largely because they are available in over-supply.

Wallet Under Pillow
He said the wallet was under his pillow when he went to bed. Police headquarters reported the Chapmans mentioned the losses but did not file a formal complaint. No other property losses were reported in the fire.

Ed Shee, manager of the hotel, said Chapman told him of the losses. Shee said he cashed a check for $50 for Chapman this morning so the couple could continue their automobile trip home.

The Chapmans were returning from Rochester, Minn. They arrived at the hotel last night about 11 p. m., a little more than three hours before the fire broke out in a nearby room.

Colo. Rancher Wants a Wife

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 12.—(P)—St. Joseph's unmarried young women—all astir last week over the lad who obtained a wife through a want ad—got a super offer today.

A Colorado rancher, name unrevealed, is seeking a wife and his grand prize is a Hawaiian honeymoon. The rancher, 28 years old, made his request in a letter to the St. Joseph News-Press, the newspaper that published the ad that resulted in the marriage of Charles Donelson. Donelson said he received more than 200 responses.

The rancher says he prefers a brunette, between 22 and 26, and points out that beauty isn't important.

Grown Out of Bonds

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(P)—A newspaper executive who helped bring the Reconstruction Finance Corporation into being in 1932, today urged congress to trim the powers of the giant government agency.

Eugene Meyer—chairman of the board of the Washington Post and one-time governor of the Federal Reserve Board—testified the RFC has spread far beyond the bounds that its creators had in mind.

Officers for Appointment to Chief of Chemical Corps."

Parts of the transcript taken from the army inspector general's records were read to the committee today by William Rogers, chief counsel.

Looks Like a Plot

Senator Mundt (R-SD) exclaimed:

"It looks to me like a sort of ingenious plot by which Hunt Waitt and Vaughan have connived to cut the throats of all the other officers trying to get that job."

Rogers said Waitt has acknowledged dictating the memorandum in Hunt's office, but he said both Waitt and Hunt deny that Hunt knew what was in it.

Mundt commented sarcastically: "We are expected to believe that Waitt dictated five pages of material in Hunt's office without Hunt knowing about it."

Mundt asked whether Waitt had a secretary of his own. He also asked whether Hunt's office is air-conditioned and Waitt's not. Rogers replied that Waitt himself will testify concerning those matters.

Rogers interrupted his reading of the transcript at one point to note that Waitt was "interested in being considered to replace himself in his job."

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Congressman Minniver Mistletoe goes home and tells the folks: "Why, sure, Congress passed a housing bill for the low-income people. Now I think Congress ought to do it for you moderate income folks."

"In fact, I introduced a bill in Congress to do just that. I'll show you. Here's a copy of the very bill with my name on it."

Sure enough. There it is. Just as he said. But maybe he forgets to tell them how he came to get his name on the bill in the first place. For instance:

Last May a Congressman introduced a housing bill for moderate-income families. A couple of months later along came another Congressman who, for some reason, wanted his own name on the bill so, without changing a word in the bill itself, he scratched out the name of the first Congressman and wrote in his own name in ink.

Bill Was Printed

Then the bill was sent down to the government printer where new copies of the same bill were made except that now the second

Congressman's name was on it.

He may go home later and tell the folks about the bill, and himself, or, maybe he had another reason for doing what he did.

There's a lot of that done.

In the House there's a rule that only one member's name can appear on a bill.

Just to show how much support that particular bill has, a whole gang of other Congressmen may have the same bill reprinted with their name on it.

All Costs Money

All this costs the taxpayers money, of course, since it's the government who does the printing, and the cost of printing a bill depends upon the number of pages.

For instance, the idea of a world federation has a lot of support in the House.

About 103 bills—all identical but bearing in each case the name of a different Congressman—were introduced to back up world federation.

In the Senate there's no rule like that of the House. There any number of Senators all can have their names lumped together on one bill.

Name Means Nothing

And a Congressman's name on a bill doesn't mean he had anything to do with writing it. The job may have been done for him by the bill-writing experts employed by Congress, after he told them what he wanted.

Or, maybe it was written by the lawyers in some government agency. Or even by the lawyers of some outside organization which got a Congressman to introduce a bill for it as his own.

Some Congressmen don't always remember—or even recognize—a bill they introduced. For example: Rep. Wolverton, New Jersey Republican, is a member of the House Interstate Commerce committee. Sitting with other committee members this week, he was discussing a railway safety bill.

Some Parts Disliked

It had been introduced this year in Congress by the committee chairman, Rep. Crosser, Ohio Democrat. There were some things about the bill which Wolverton disliked.

He protested that the committee never had been told who wrote it. Just then William J. Patterson, a member of the Interstate Commerce committee, spoke up:

He said he and a member of his staff had written the bill a year ago and that a year ago it was introduced by Wolverton.

This year it was reintroduced by Crosser.

Wolverton remembered then and said he had introduced it as courtesy for the ICC although, when doing that, a Congressman may not like everything in the bill.

Donating Blood For The Second Time

Mrs. Clovis Moore, 108 South Prospect avenue, is making a second blood donation to the Bothwell hospital, through the cooperation of the Red Cross. Donors are so badly needed that seconds are being called. Women may give four times a year, men five times. An appeal is again made to those who can register to donate to do so.

Sunday School Lesson

Hebrews Sang Praises Of The Lord

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.
The writer of the 137th Psalm, in a vivid historical record, tells how their Babylonian captors required mirth of the Jewish exiles in Babylon, saying: "Sing us one of the songs of Zion."

Just what these songs of Zion were we do not know, for many of the finest Psalms seem to have come out of the Exile, and the post-Exilic period. Probably they were earlier Psalms, or such songs as those in which great events and experiences in Jewish life and history had been celebrated, like that of Miriam, the Prophetess, in Exodus 15, and Psalms attributed to David.

The intensity with which the Jewish Exile resented Babylonian mockery, and his devotion to the songs of Israel, was marked in his passionate outburst: "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land? If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning, let my tongue cling to the roof of my mouth."

This marked also, the place of song in Jewish religion and its part in the great Jewish feasts and festivals in which devotion to God, the Giver and Protector of His people, and the memory of God's dealings with them was kept alive.

There were many feasts and festivals, some local in character, but the great national festivals, involving all the people, were four: 1. The Feast of the Passover, followed immediately by the Feast of Unleavened Bread, during which the offering of a barley sheaf marked the opening of the reaping season. 2. The Feast of Pentecost, seven weeks later, or on the 50th day, celebrating the completion of the corn harvest. 3. The Feast of Tabernacles, the Jewish harvest home, when all had been gathered in a joyous time when the people lived in booths, commemorating the time when Israel had lived in tents in the journeying from Egypt. 4. The Feast of the Dedication of the Temple.

Hasting's Bible Dictionary states that at these four Feasts, or Festivals, some joyous, some solemn, the "Egyptian Hallel," consisting of Psalms 113-118, as one whole, was sung. This "Egyptian Hallel" was so-called to distinguish it from the "great Hallel" (Psalms 120 to 136) and from the Psalms of praise, 146 to 149, "Hallel" meaning "praise."

What these religious practices meant and their effect can well be seen in the continuity of Jewish life and religion, in spite of all the trials of dispersion, exile, persecution and disaster, and the changes in which nations and peoples, once formidable, have gone down to ruin.

The maintenance of periods and occasions of remembrance, telling it to the generation following, with religious fervor and in the spirit of devotion, and in the songs of a people — this, in the history and religion of Israel is something that other nations and peoples might well take to heart. Our national holidays tend to mean too little, or to become only interludes of pleasure, where they ought to be what a name that has lost its meaning implies — holy days, sanctified in the memory of the great things they celebrate an din reconsecration to God and man.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"SOUL" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 14, 1949.

Golden Text: Isa. 57:15.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else." (Deut. 4:39). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text-book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul, being Spirit, is seen in nothing imperfect nor material. Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit. Separated from man, who expresses Soul, Spirit would be a nonentity; man, divorced from Spirit, would lose his entity. But there is, there can be, no such division, for man is co-existent with God." (p. 477)

Spiritual Guidance

St. Paul's conversion took place when he was on his way to Damascus to devise new persecutions for the Christians. Blinded by the light of God, he cried out: "Lord, what do You want me to do?" He was given detailed instructions as to how he was to save himself from the slavery of evil and become an apostle of good.

Every Christian who seeks to know the road he must follow in order to win salvation has only to turn to God in humility and sincerity to obtain the guidance he needs. Only a few have been vouchsafed a personal revelation, but God provides other ways of finding the right road.

As a child, a man learns the simple precepts of right and wrong from his parents. As he grows older he either attends a school conducted under religious auspices, or goes to Sunday school. Throughout adolescence he has a variety of books at his disposal that will guide his mind along spiritual paths. Finally, he has the inspiration that comes from regular church-going and frequent consultation with his minister or priest.

Man's chief guide in pursuing the path of perfection is his conscience. This inner voice, which he is bound to cultivate and keep correctly informed, tells him what is lawful and what is wrong. If he is sincere, his conscience will illuminate him with its light and truth, and keep him from the snares of vanity and pride.

To obey one's conscience at all times means keeping a high resolve in the face of inevitable temptation. But it can be done by resorting to prayer in every trial and difficulty. The courage to make the right decision in all cases is a benefit we should ask repeatedly of God, who has promised to help all who approach Him with reverence and true devotion.

James Minor Jones, Administrator of the estate of May Belle Ramsey, deceased, presents to the Court his petition, praying for an order for the sale of so much of the real estate of said deceased, described as follows, to-wit:

Lot One (1) in Gary's Addition to the City of Sedalia, Missouri, known as 120 N. Broadway and being decedent's home place:
Also, beginning at a point 207 feet West of the Southeast Corner of the Southeast Quarter of the Northeast Quarter of Section 33 in Township 46 North of Range 21 West of the 5th Principal Meridian, thence running North 621 feet, thence West 69 feet, thence South 621 feet, thence East 69 feet to the place of beginning, less any part thereof included in a right-of-way to the State of Missouri in Deed recorded in Book 217 1/2 at Page 20, and less 212 feet attempted to be conveyed by decedent's Mother (widow of Jerry Nelson) to Lee Nelson and subsequently sold to Chas. Gentry for taxes, as Tax Trustee, which would appear to leave approximately 259' x 69', less said highway deed, and includes the house in the rear of said 120 N. Broadway in Sedalia, Missouri, as will pay and satisfy the remaining debts due by said estate, and yet unpaid for want of sufficient assets, accompanied by the accounts list, and inventories required by law in such case.
On examination whereof, it is ordered that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased be notified that application as aforesaid has been made, and that unless the contrary be shown on or before Tuesday, August 30th, 1949, an order will be made for the sale of the whole, or so much of the real estate of said deceased as will be sufficient for the payment of said debts; and it is further ordered that this notice be published in some newspaper in Pettis County, this State for four weeks prior to said date.

Attest: A true copy from the record.
J. E. SMITH,
Judge and Ex-Officio Clerk of Probate Court, Pettis County, Missouri.
Attorney: Hazel Palmer.

Germans Condemn All But Themselves For Their Woes

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Displays of intense nationalism and strident criticism of the Allied occupation have reached a high pitch during the Western German election campaign which reaches its climax Sunday.

The Germans are condemning everyone except themselves for the country's woes. There is an oratorical revolt against allied controls. The international Ruhr authority has been one of the prime objects of attack. So has the reparations program.

German leaders cite the presence in the west of 11,000,000 German refugees from the Polish and Russian zones as a development which the allies have refused to consider in its relationship to cost of government and reparations charges.

The campaign started out on domestic issues—Socialism versus free enterprise, states rights versus centralized government, the extent of federal economic controls, and the like.

The German political leaders for the most part supported the allied stand at the Paris conference ministers which failed to make any progress toward German unification. They wanted no compromise with Russia which might mean any interference or curtailment of the approach to independence promised by their projected new government.

Villification Intensifies
So the Communists rallied at the other parties as dividers of Germany and called them collaborators.

To squelch this, the leaders of all major parties began to prove their freedom to criticize the allies. The villification, it seems to me, has been permitted to reach a pitch far beyond what is technically allowed under the occupation rules. The German leaders who profess to be on "our side" have come pretty close to the some sort of thing for which the British once jailed Max Reimann, the Communist leader.

Britain and France have taken most of the pummeling. More prudence has been displayed regarding the U. S. which makes food shipments and other contributions to the German economy.

A good many allied authorities take the attitude that its just politics. The same type of thing to which democracies become accustomed in their own elections.

But there have been anti-semitic and other demonstrations distressingly remindful of Germany's recent history. If experienced German politicians expect to gain popular support through the type of appeals they have been making, then they must know that Germans are still infested with a lot of ideas which will make it necessary for the allies to keep them under close surveillance.

ROUGH SAILING ON ITS WAY OUT—This will be the coming thing in large passenger ships and luxury liners, according to speedboat designer and manufacturer Gar Wood. It's the Venturi, Wood's newest design, shown in Detroit. The twin-hulled yacht is said to be able to ride the roughest type of water and still maintain its even keel. Wood says the unique "tunnel" construction pockets air on which the craft rides, preventing rough sailing even in heavy seas at high speed.

Support Plan On Basic Crops Is Favored

By Francis J. Kelly
WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—A Senate agriculture subcommittee erased the last traces of the Brannan plan from a compromise farm price support bill Thursday then approved the measure unanimously.

It calls in general for government support at 90 per cent of parity next year for the so-called basic crops, and flexible crops which could range somewhat lower for others.

Senator Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the seven-man drafting subcommittee, said the compromise would be presented Saturday to the full committee, which has 13 members. Today's vote made its approval there appear certain, unless some member changes his mind.

Anderson, who has worked on nine different drafts of the compromise, originally advocated a limited trial of the "production payment" or farmers subsidy pay advocated by Secretary of Agriculture

Brannan. So many restrictions were put around such a trial, however, that at length the proposal was withdrawn at Brannan's own request.

Is Not Giving Up Fight

In doing so, Brannan was not abandoning his fight for enactment of his program some time in the future.

Under Brannan's plan, the government would make no further effort to support the price of perishable farm products. Instead, they would be allowed to reach whatever level the market would bring. Brannan says this would help the consumers. However, if the farmers' return from a crop failed to match a previously determined "fair income" level, they would get subsidies from the government (which is to say the taxpayers) for the balance.

The crops which Congress has designated as basic—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts—would be supported at or near 90 per cent of parity next year. In succeeding years, if supplies became excessive, the secretary of agriculture could reduce the support level to as low as 75 per cent of parity.

Milk and butterfat would get support at 75 to 90 per cent, and the secretary would be empowered to go above 90 per cent on them if he determines that such a step was necessary.

A flexible support range of from 60 to 90 per cent of parity would be established for wool, mohair, tung nuts and Irish potatoes.

All other farm crops could be supported at up to 90 per cent of parity. Storable crops such as oats, barley, rye and meats would be supported at from 75 to 90 per cent of parity, unless a lower level was required by a lack of funds.

In order to qualify for the full supports, farmers would have to comply with planting, production and marketing restrictions promulgated by the secretary of agriculture.

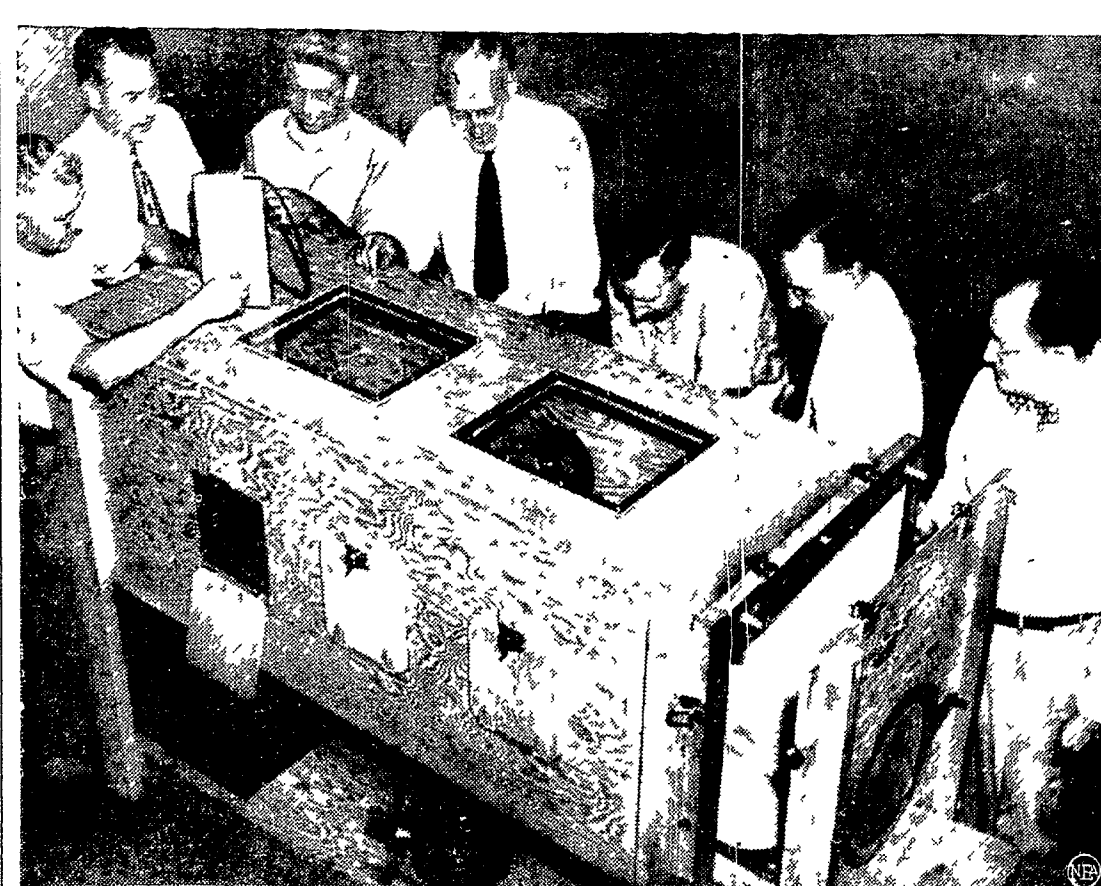

The House has passed a bill to continue supports next year at a rigid 90 per cent of parity, after rejecting the Brannan plan.

But unless the House and Senate get together on mutually acceptable legislation, the delayed-action Aiken law will take effect next January. This measure, which permits flexible supports at 60 to 90 per cent of parity, was passed by the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

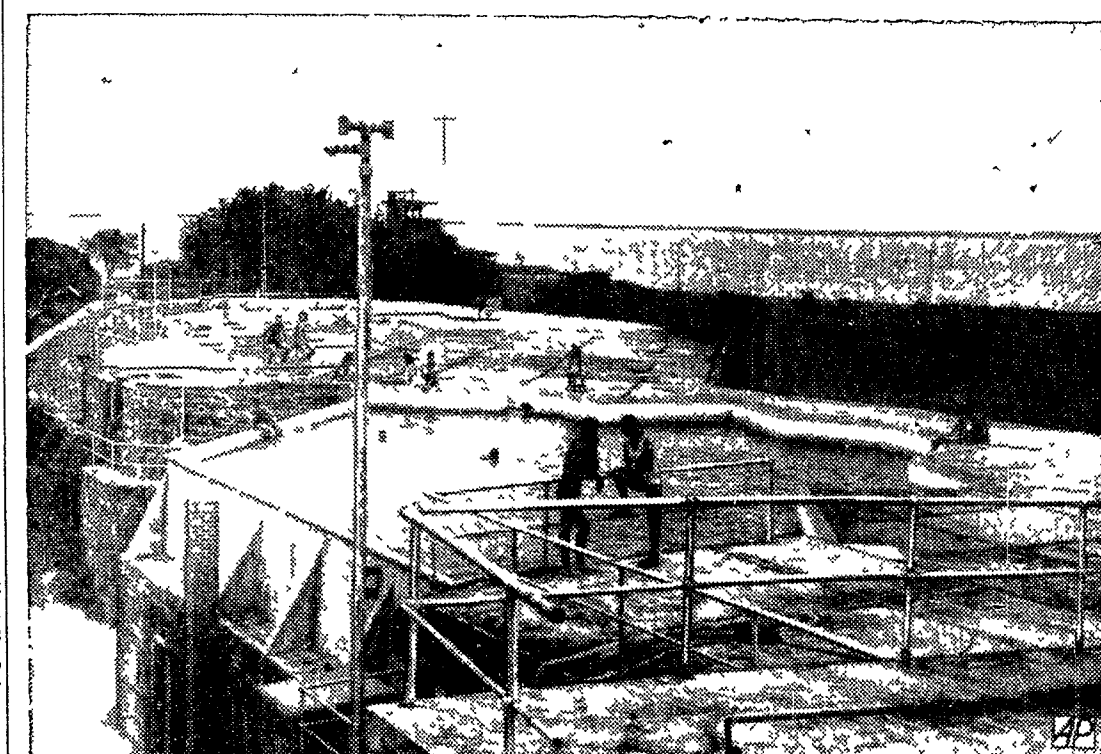

Worst In Polio May Be Over

By The Associated Press
The spread of infantile paralysis leveled off in early August—normally one of the worst periods of the year—and health leaders in some areas of the nation expressed the hope the worst may be over.

Polio still is mauling in nearly every section of the country, an Associated Press survey showed today, but the rate of increase is holding steady. (The U. S. Public Health Service, OLD WOODSIDES—Engineers in Bloomington, Ill., designed and built this plywood iron lung for use in the local hospital. The home-made lung is made mostly of wood, but it also includes everything from auto innertubes to an alarm clock.

ice, in a report for the week ended August 6, said the rate of increase was slackening compared with late July. The Health Service said new cases increased only 25 per cent over the week ended July 30, while that week was 36 per cent ahead of the previous week.)

A state by state check showed some 3,100 new cases have developed from July 31 through August 9. The first four days of that period brought 1,400 new cases and the last five, 1,750 cases. The average was some 350 new cases a day.

The new cases brought the 1949 total to date to 11,000—4,000 above the similar 1948 period. The year 1948, which recorded a total of 27,680 cases, was the second worst in the country's history, topped only by the 30,000 in 1916.

However, the 1949 polio season started several weeks earlier this year. Some health authorities believe this may indicate the 1949 season also will end earlier.

The worst and most baffling spot in the country is Texas. Some 1,339 cases have been reported in that state this year compared with 1,042 for the same period in 1948—worst year in the state's history. Polio ordinarily does not strike hard in the same area two years in a row. August and September are expected to be the worst months for Texas.

Other hardest hit states and cases to date include New York 1,110, Illinois 720, California 626, Missouri 597, Oklahoma 592, Arkansas 577, Michigan 569.

However, for the nation as a whole only one of each 15,000 persons has contracted the disease and only one in each 150,000 has died from polio.

Crash By Plane; 26 Escaped

Hit Runway At Portland, Maine, Then Burned Thursday Night

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 11.—(AP)—A Northeast Airlines plane from Boston crashed and burned on the Municipal Airport tonight. Everyone aboard—20 passengers and six employees—escaped safely.

The line's office at the field said the two-engine ship would be a complete loss.

"The left wing's gone and the rest is burning," an employee said. The plane was a special flight from Boston.

Three of the employees were in the plane's crew. The others were dead-heading.

Everyone escaped before flames enveloped the plane—a new Convair.

Apparently nobody was injured. The passengers included a month-old baby.

Byron Israelson, a Portland Press Herald reporter who was at the airport, said the plane hit the north-south runway "with a jolt."

"As it settled down there was a scraping noise, as if the landing gear collapsed. A shower of sparks rose from the plane and then it burst into flames."

Passengers and crew got out a rear emergency door, jumping about two feet to the ground. The regular exit was jammed shut.

A fleet of cabs, awaiting the plane's landing, drove out onto the runway. The drivers helped the passengers out and took them to the administration building.

All the passengers praised stewardess Patricia Donellan, 23, of North Quincy, Mass., for her cool-headedness.

Miss Donellan had been on the job just two and a half weeks. She said the plane "pancaked"—landed flat on its belly—when the landing gear apparently collapsed.

A passenger, Mrs. Cora Connors of Portland, said "it was amazing. The people in the ship were the calmest persons I ever saw."

Raked In Fish That Came To The Top of Water

Several teen-aged fishermen lined the banks of the Liberty Park lagoon Thursday, raking in the fish by the dozens without exerting much effort.

Since chemicals have been spread over the lagoon to purify the water and to rid the lagoon of the odor and greenish slimy water now in existence, many fish have died.

Cat fish and bass seem to survive the chemicals in the lagoon but hundreds of gold fish could be seen coming up for air ever so often and others half stunned are an easy catch for the fishermen who hook them in the gills, using no bait.

Two men in a boat Thursday netted three bushel baskets and three five-gallon cans full of dead fish, which were taken to the disposal grounds and buried.

One of the men said all fish that lived through the day will continue to survive the chemicals, which are scheduled to show results in a day or two.

Donald Dietzman, 7-year-old fisherman was the "big wheel" Thursday. He handled the catch. Several of his buddies kept Donald constantly busy stringing eight and twelve inch fish on the line, which he had charge of dipping in the water.

Even though they were catching the fish by the pounds, the boys didn't know what they were going to do with them, because their catch consisted mostly of goldfish, considered inedible.

Plane Down, No One Hurt

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A single engine plane, piloted by James R. Bissell, Jr., of St. Louis, and carrying three other passengers, smashed into a tree stump in a forced landing near here today and flipped on its back. No one was hurt seriously.

The Bissells, both 40; their 12-year-old son and Howard Booth, 46, also of St. Louis, were flying from St. Louis to Estes Park, Colo., for the week-end.

The oil line of the plane clogged after they had passed over Kansas City. Bissell tried to make it to an airport at Lawrence, Kas., but decided the plane would not be able to make it, and landed in a field seven miles southwest of Bonner Springs, Kas.

Bissell is president of the Bissell Dry Goods Co., St. Louis, and Booth, St. Louis, is a buyer for the store. Bissell was cut on the chin and Booth was cut over the right eye. Mrs. Bissell and the son, James R. Bissell III, were unhurt.

The Bissells live at 450 Lee Ave., Webster Groves, Mo. They are returning to St. Louis.

Parachute Jumper to Take Part in Lions' Air Show

A parachute jumper will be on hand, Sunday afternoon, at the Air Show being sponsored by the Sedalia Lions Club at the Municipal Air Field, to thrill the crowd.

The Lions committee, in charge of the program, announced it had received word from Kansas City a "jumper" had been secured and was coming.

The "jumper" will be made about 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and the committee has made arrangements with Jack Funk's Flying Service to give 20 free rides to aviation fans.

First Aid workers will be on the grounds in case anyone becomes ill while attending the show or is injured. Dr. E. L. Rhodes and Dr. Carl D. Siegel and the Ewing ambulance will be on the grounds.

Traffic is being handled through the State Highway Patrol and members of the Lions Club with several Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion Auxiliary police who have offered their services.

It is the first show to be sponsored by the Lions Club, and is expected to become an annual affair. Last year the Sedalia Flying Club held the show, and former members of the club, who are now in the C. A. P., are assisting this year.

General Stay In Far East

MacArthur Is Of Opinion He Should Stay At His Post There

TOKYO, Friday, Aug. 12.—(AP)—General MacArthur today declined to return to the United States.

In a statement he declared his full views on the strategic situation in the Far East were in the hands of the Department of the Army.

The general made his position clear after Senator Knowland (Calif.) had introduced a resolution in Washington to have MacArthur return and state his views on the foreign arms aid bill.

President Truman said in Washington that he would sign an order for MacArthur to return any time the occupation commander in Japan wanted to return.

Remain At Post
MacArthur said that while he was "deeply appreciative of the honor" reflected in the proposal that he go to Washington he believed "that during this moment of critical events in the Far East the interests of the American people are better served by my remaining at my post here."

The general added that he understood both the President and Secretary of Defense Johnson had left it up to him to decide.

Well Known Couple to Meet
ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley of St. Louis will be the guest of Vice President Barkley Sunday at Paducah, Ky., at a hometown celebration in his honor.

She will be accompanied by her 17-year-old daughter, Anne.

The vice president's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, are to come with him from Washington.

Their plans for the week-end were reported in Washington yesterday and confirmed here by friends of Mrs. Hadley.

The Paducah airport will be rededicated and renamed for the city's favorite son.

It will be the third meeting in three weeks for Barkley and Mrs. Hadley, a pretty brunette widow whose husband, a railroad attorney, died four years ago.

Both have denied that they plan to be married this week-end at Paducah.

Rolls Bed to Window; Falls to His Death
NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Samuel Goppelberg, 24, one of the millions suffering from New York's heat wave, moved his bed over near a window last night to get a bit of air.

His shrieks woke the neighbors at 4 a. m. (EST) today.

Rolling over in his sleep, he fell out the window to death in a rear yard five floors below.

Urging Special Postage
WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Senator Kem (R-Mo) suggested yesterday that a special postage stamp be issued to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Eugene Field.

Field was born Sept. 3, 1850, in St. Louis. He worked on the St. Joseph, Mo., Gazette, the St. Louis Journal, the Kansas City Times and Chicago Morning News while gaining fame as a children's poet.

Railroad Clerk Killed
DECATUR, Ill., Aug. 11.—(AP)—A Washburn railroad clerk was killed early today by a moving car-boose in the line's east Decatur yards.

Robert W. Rucker, 22, was the victim. Rucker formerly was employed by the road at Hannibal, Mo. His late father, I. K. Rucker, was a telegraph operator at Hannibal for many years.

Referred to Inconsistencies
The speaker called attention to inconsistencies of business men who clamor for government economy, reduction of taxes on one hand and on the other appeal to Washington for government hand-outs for local projects.

Continued encroachments of government on the freedoms of the people unless resisted will lead to collectivism, he said. Freedom must be fought for and won in every generation.

President Bert Hathaway announced there would be a meeting of the board of directors at his home, 717 East Eleventh street, Friday night.

Five Perish In Fire
REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Five persons, three of them children, died in a fire which burned a farmhouse at Nordfjordur on the east coast today. Four other persons were seriously injured.

Child Seriously Wounded By Sister

FULTON, Mo., Aug. 11.—(AP)—An eight-year-old girl was shot and gravely wounded here this afternoon when a rifle in the hands of her 12-year-old sister was discharged.

Esther Fletcher, was struck in the abdomen and the bullet lodged near her spine when the gun was accidentally discharged by her sister, Viola Fletcher. Hospital authorities at Fulton expressed belief the little girl would live.

The highway patrol report the gun apparently was accidentally discharged after the older girl picked it up. According to their report the children had jolted the gun from its usual resting place above the front door of their home and when Viola lifted it from the floor it discharged, striking the younger girl.

Free Hand For Ford Walkout

Contract Talks To Continue For While At Least

DETROIT, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A whopping strike vote victory today gave the CIO United Auto Workers a free hand in calling a Ford walkout.

UAW President Walter Reuther said, however, there would be no immediate strike. Contract talks will continue for a while at least.

In the state-conducted strike vote, Michigan Ford employees rolled up a 7-1 majority for a walkout. This handed the UAW extra ammunition to back up its drive for worker pensions.

Ford Motor Co., said the returns did not alter its position. The company has refused during two months of bargaining to consider any wage increase.

The union's International Executive Board met at 1 p. m. (EST) today to act on election results. It was expected to authorize union officers to order Ford's 106,000 hourly workers out whenever they see fit. Reuther said, however, that no announcement on the board's action would be forthcoming today.

Vote Was Heavy
The huge total of 75,230 ballots cast came as a surprise. It was 93 per cent of eligible voters.

The final count listed 65,001 for a strike and 9,549 against in 17 Michigan plants. Officials set aside 680 ballots.

Ford has insisted that wages be frozen at present levels for 12 months. In its stand, the company has become industry's first line of defense against the CIO's pension campaign.

The UAW is demanding $100 monthly pensions, health benefits and a cost-of-living wage increase.

Business Men Should Take Responsibility

Urging business men to take more interest in pending legislation and concern themselves with the growing tendency of government to extend its influence over the individual by laws and regulations, Tom V. Watson, National Affairs Advisor for the United States Chamber of Commerce, addressed Sedalia Kiwanians at their meeting in Bothwell hotel Thursday noon.

The speaker was introduced by John Zander, manager of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce. Guy M. Bailey was program chairman.

Mr. Watson in his talk stressed the importance of local Chambers of Commerce proving a program of work, establishment of a national affairs committee, and the acceptance of responsibilities by individual members. He encouraged business men to take a stand on legislative issues affecting themselves.

Referred to Inconsistencies
The speaker called attention to inconsistencies of business men who clamor for government economy, reduction of taxes on one hand and on the other appeal to Washington for government hand-outs for local projects.

Continued encroachments of government on the freedoms of the people unless resisted will lead to collectivism, he said. Freedom must be fought for and won in every generation.

President Bert Hathaway announced there would be a meeting of the board of directors at his home, 717 East Eleventh street, Friday night.

Charge Return Of Gambling

Mayor Of Jefferson City Makes It In Radio Address

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Commercialized gambling is moving back, "furtively and slyly," into Missouri's capital city, the mayor charged tonight in a radio address.

Mayor Lawrence Lutkewitte, former Jefferson City newspaperman, said the gambling is going on in hotel rooms and closed business rooms.

"There the free and easy boys congregate and seek to lure their victims," the Republican mayor declared on his regular weekly broadcast over station KWOS.

"They are difficult to detect," he said, "because they move from place to place. The authorities have been reliably informed that in one or two instances they have taken over gambling games that were started at private picnics and operated them on a grandiose scale, croquet stick and all."

"The war against them must be waged relentlessly. Vigilance must be constant or they will take over and be in a position to again thumb their noses at authority."

Places Not Mentioned
He did not use names or locate the alleged gambling games. Or have police raids been made recently.

Lutkewitte also pointed to the "lesser forms of gambling which are being constantly employed here for some good cause or other. No police raids have been made recently."

"They have the veneer of decency because they may be labeled as go-gooders. It is difficult to understand why the public goes for them as it does."

"The other day on High street (the main street in Jefferson City) at three of our principal business corners, automobiles and refrigerators lured dollars and dimes from the pockets of the gullible."

"x x x That sort of thing is against the law and if we countenance it we are party to the violation. It seems to be popular and enforcing the ordinance against it therefore is going to be extremely unpopular."

Lutkewitte, elected last April, said he would not act to stop such forms of lesser gambling for the first year of his term, unless the people desired that action.

Then he asked: "Do you want it that way next year?"

There have been frequent reports in the last seven months that commercialized gambling forges have been edging into various sections of the state

Boy, 9, Struck By Lightning

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 11.—(AP)—One of these days little Roger Alberts can touch the scars on his stomach and hips and recall: "Now when I was struck by lightning . . ."

A bolt of lightning smacked him down yesterday as he played in his yard in nearby Cedar City. It knocked him out for about five minutes.

The doctor said when he recovers from the burns he'll be all right.

But it was an awful jolt for nine-year-old Roger.

When he recovered consciousness he told his mother, Mrs. C. S. Alberts: "I don't want to die, mother. I don't want to die."

By Francis J. Kelly

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A Senate agriculture subcommittee erased the last traces of the Brannan plan from a compromise farm price support bill today, then approved the measure unanimously.

It calls in general for government supports at 90 per cent of parity next year for the so-called basic crops, and flexible props which could range somewhat lower for others.

Senator Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the seven-man drafting subcommittee, said the compromise would be presented Saturday to the full committee, which has 13 members. Today's vote made its approval there appear certain, unless some member changes his mind.

Anderson, who has worked on nine different drafts of the compromise, originally advocated a limited trial of the "production payment" or farmers subsidy pay advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. So many restrictions were put around such a trial, however, that at length the proposal was withdrawn at Brannan's own request.

Is Not Giving Up Fight
In doing so, Brannan was not abandoning his fight for enactment of his program some time in the future.

Under Brannan's plan, the government would make no further effort to support the price of perishable farm products. Instead, they would be allowed to reach whatever level the market would bring. Brannan says this would help the consumer.

The crops which Congress has designated as basic—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts—would be supported at or near 90 per cent of parity next year. In succeeding years, if supplies became excessive, the secretary of agriculture could reduce the support level to as low as 75 per cent of parity.

Milk and butterfat would get support at 75 to 90 per cent, and the secretary would be empowered to go above 90 per cent on them if he determines that such a step was necessary.

A flexible support range of from 60 to 90 per cent of parity would be established for wool, mohair, tung nuts and Irish potatoes.

All other farm crops could be supported at up to 90 per cent of parity. Storable crops, such as oats, barley, rye and meats, would be supported at from 75 to 90 per cent of parity, unless a lower level was required by a lack of funds.

In order to qualify for the full supports, farmers would have to comply with planting, production and marketing restrictions promulgated by the secretary of agriculture.

The House has passed a bill to continue supports next year at a rigid 90 per cent of parity, after rejecting the Brannan plan.

But unless the House and Senate get together on mutually acceptable legislation, the delayed action Aiken law will take effect next January. This measure, which permits flexible supports at 60 to 90 per cent of parity, was passed by the Republican-controlled 80th Congress.

69-Year-Old St. Louisan Rides the 'Blinds' to Sedalia

"Things move too fast these days," said Albert Ruzie, 69 years old St. Louisan at police headquarters Thursday. Ruzie had been picked up for riding the "blinds" on a Missouri Pacific streamliner.

"The Missouri State Fair came into my mind while I was in Jefferson City at the railroad station. When the train came in I decided I would go to Sedalia instead of St. Louis and here I am. But the fair isn't till next week so I'm going on home," Ruzie explained.

"Senator Mike Kinney is a friend of mine and I just went to Jefferson City to visit him. He just loves us 'old men' and we just love him," Ruzie said.

When picked up Ruzie had $18.00 on him and he remarked he just wanted to ride the "blinds." "Why, I can remember some forty years ago it took 14 hours to come to Sedalia from Jefferson City, and now on these new fangle trains it's hardly more than an hour."

Ruzie told of coming to the United States 40 years ago when he was barely 19 years old,

Abe Rosenthal Visits His Old Home Town, Friends In Can.

Abe Rosenthal, 1003 West Seventh street, Mrs. Rosenthal and their two daughters have recently returned from a trip through the east and into Canada. Mr. Rosenthal's former home, they stopped in Brantford, where Mr. Rosenthal called on an old friend, a newspaper man.

After cordial greetings the man remarked that Mr. Rosenthal's calling at that time was quite a coincidence, because only a few days before, in the "Twenty-five Years Ago" column, they had carried the following article:

"Abe Rosenthal, Hamilton, took over the leadership of the Temple Theatre Orchestra here."

In London, Ontario, Mr. Rosenthal was interviewed by a representative of the Free Press, where a lengthy story was carried. It reads in part:

"You can believe Abe Rosenthal when he says a town of 50,000 is capable of supporting a 50-piece symphony and a male choir. He's from Missouri and he can show you proof of both statements."

"When Abe was 14 and a resident of Hamilton, Ontario, he decided to learn how to play the violin. Three years later he made his living by music alone and continued music as a career until 1930, when he moved away from his home town."

Played at London
"In the meantime, he had conducted orchestras in theatres, and yesterday, when he paid a visit to The London Free Press, he recalled playing a road show at the Grand Theatre here. He was just beginning theatre stunts and the show was appropriately titled, 'Experience.'"

"He studied in Hamilton and Toronto and became concertmaster of the Hamilton Symphony."

"But Missouri called, and he went to Sedalia in 1930 to be employed by the Milton Oil Company. At present he is division manager of that company."

"Tell them Sedalia is 80 miles from Harry Truman's home town of Independence," Mr. Rosenthal advised.

Symphony Organized
"Whether nearness to the piano playing president's town influenced him or not, remains an unanswered question. But the fact does stand that the Hamilton man turned to music in his leisure hours and helped organize the Sedalia Symphony Orchestra 15 years ago."

"Three years ago he began the Sedalia Choral Club, which at present consists of 34 members, all male, drawn from the town and surrounding district."

"The symphony had just 15 members its first few years. Mr. Rosenthal believes an orchestra should be started with a small number of good players and built up as additional able instrumentalists appear."

Visiting Brother
"Abe Rosenthal is relaxing these days, visiting his brother, J. Rosenthal, at 917 Waterloo street. But it doesn't keep him from looking ahead to 'hobby days,' and training his 12-year-old daughter, Willis Ann, to play the flute so that she can be a member of the symphony's woodwind section. Another daughter, Joann, plays the piano and is accompanist for the orchestra."

Greater things in the musical future of Sedalia are seen by its citizens.

Depends on Conductor
"The success of an amateur orchestra depends on the conductor."

The major Girl Scout project for 1948 and continuing to March, 1949, was "Clothes for Friendship." Every Girl Scout in the United States was asked to assist in this program. More than 100,000 Clothing Kits were shipped abroad through the American Friends Service Committee.

The Girl Scout troops of Sedalia have received several acknowledgements of the 106 Clothing Kits sent from here.

The following letter was received this week by Mrs. H. C. Salvator, Commissioner, at the time the Kits were shipped.

"Dear Mrs. Salvator: Enclosed you will find a letter of thanks which we have received through the American Friends Service Committee from abroad, in appreciation of clothing kits.

"Since the young people abroad could not afford postage for each letter, the Friends sent them to us in bulk. We, in turn, are asking you to distribute this to the troop leader to whom it belongs. The reason for this is that in many cases the addresses on the envelopes are inaccurate, and we are anxious for each troop sending clothing kits to be thanked for them." Sincerely, Girl Scouts of the United States of America, Program Department.

The letter, written from the American Zone in Germany, is being mailed to Miss Mary Jane Cox, leader of Troop 25, Hubbard School.

Address on Postal Service Given to Members of Kiwanis

"The Postal Service, and Rural Free Delivery," was the subject of a talk by Paul G. Benson, Sedalia, rural mail carrier, and National Committeeman of the Rural Mail Carriers Association, before the Sedalia Kiwanis Club. Mr. Benson's remarks were as follows:

"The Postal Service has been in existence since time immemorial. Posts were used to heard the fall of Ancient Babylon and numerous references are made in the Bible to the use and swiftness of the Posts. The original Posts could really be classified as Rural Delivery Service as they consisted of horses and men in relays to forward messages from outlying Provinces to the various Capitals of Ancient time.

"The Postal Service in this Country was established by the Continental Congress in 1775 and Benjamin Franklin was the first Postmaster General. It has kept pace with the growth of this great Nation until it now ranks in the scope of its operations with the country's largest business enterprises. It is owned by and operated for the American people. The Constitution of the United States provided for a national Postal system established as a Service institution. Since its inception—its motto has been "The Mail Must Go Through." This motto is rooted and grounded in the heart of every Postal Employee.

Taken for Granted "The average citizen takes the Postal Service for granted giving little, if any, thought to the vast and intricate system that has been set up in order to give him prompt and efficient service. As long as the service operates for him in a normal manner he is satisfied. However, every citizen would have a greater appreciation of the Service if he would familiarize himself with the magnitude of this great institution which serves him daily and of which he owns a part interest. I am justly proud to be a small part of this vast enterprise which is so vital to the success of every business and professional man in Sedalia.

"The complete operations of the Service is administered in Washington, D. C. by the Post Office Department. The Department is headed by the Postmaster General who is a member of the President's Cabinet. His immediate staff includes the Director of the Budget, the Solicitor and the Purchasing Agent. The office of the Purchasing Agent buys every single item of equipment used in the Service from Mail Trucks to twine. The Department is further organized into Four Major Bureaus each headed by an Assistant Postmaster General. In addition to these four major Bureaus there is the Bureau of the Chief Inspector and the Bureau of Accounts.

Some Duties "The Bureau of the First Assistant Postmaster General is charged with the establishment, organization and maintenance of the Service in General and has supervision over all personnel. The Bureau of the Second Assistant has jurisdiction over all transportation of the mails including the Railway Mail Service, Air transportation and International Postal Service. The Third Assistant has jurisdiction over all transportation of the mails including the Railway Mail Service, Air transportation and International Newspapers and periodicals, stamps, Registry Service, Parcel Savings, Parcel Post and Finance. The Bureau of the Fourth Assistant has under its jurisdiction Postoffice Quarters, Motor Vehicle Service, Division of Equipment and supplies, Federal Buildings and Mail Equipment Shops.

"The First Assistant Postmaster General has three deputy assistants and his Bureau is organized into six divisions.—Division of Budget and Administrative Services, Division of Post Office Clerical Service, Division of City Delivery Service, Division of Post Office Personnel, Division of Postmasters and Division of Rural Delivery Service. Each of these Divisions is headed by a Director. The Director of the Rural Delivery Service is a former rural carrier who was National President of our Organization. Hon. J. E. Cooper.

"I would like to give you gentlemen a brief summary of the history and growth of the Rural Delivery Service of which I am proud to be a part. The question might arise as to why you as residents of a city would be interested in Rural Mail Delivery but I will venture to assert that every member of this club utilizes the Rural Mail Service regularly in connection with your business or profession. The success of every urban community depends to a large extent on its rural trade territory and the Rural Mails are used extensively in the effort to bring the rural patrons to town.

Rural Delivery Service "The Rural Delivery Service was instituted in 1896. In this rapidly expanding country there was a definite need of rural postal service. When legislation for the Service was introduced in the House of Representatives there was much opposition from those who feared such a plan would bankrupt the country. However with an appropriation of $40,000 for its backing, the first experimental rural delivery service was made available from Charlestown, Halltown and Uvilla, West Virginia, effective October 1, 1896. West Virginia was the home state of the Postmaster General at that time, the Honorable William L. Wilson. Each of these routes averaged about 20 miles and each of the five carriers received a yearly salary of $200.00. In the first 9 months there had been established 82 routes from 43 Postoffices in 29 states. By 1903 there were 15,000 rural carriers over the United States. From that humble beginning the Service rapidly expanded and reached its peak in 1925 when there was a total of 45,189 rural routes in the country. At that time, due to constant road improvement and the change in the method of delivery from horse and buggy to automobiles, a program of consolidation of rural routes was instituted. Routes were lengthened in this manner until at the present time the average route length is 45 miles. The 50th anniversary Golden Jubilee of the Rural Delivery Service was celebrated in 1946. The National Rural Letter Carriers' Association held a most impressive memorial service at the grave of the first rural carrier in the United States in the cemetery at Charlestown, West Virginia. As a member of the National Board of Control of this Association it was a high honor and privilege for me to be present at this impressive ceremony. Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, who was then First Assistant gave the memorial address. The Association which has so signally honored me has always held high the noble traditions of the Rural Delivery Service.

"On January 1, 1949, there were 32,494 rural routes in operation, the rural carriers serving these routes traveling 1,500,000 miles each day and giving complete Postal Service to 30,000,000 rural Americans. Missouri is among the states having the largest number of rural carriers. There are over 1500 rural carriers in this state serving almost half the population of the state. Illinois has the largest number of rural carriers with 1722. Wyoming is the smallest state in which we have an organization with 32 carriers. We do not have an organization in the states of Nevada and Utah there being less than a dozen carriers in each of these states.

"The rural carriers truly operates a "Postoffice on wheels" bringing every facility of the Postal Service to the farmer's mail box. He delivers and collects mail, sells stamps, takes applications for money orders, registers letters, insures packages and his daily stops at the familiar rural mail boxes are eagerly awaited by his patrons. The rural carrier enjoys a closer personal relationship with his patrons than any other postal employee. In many instances the farmers use the same make of tires, batteries, chains, automobiles etc. as do their rural carriers as they well know these commodities get a good trial on a rural mail route. In many isolated sections of our country the rural carrier is the only representative of the Government with whom rural people come in contact. To these people the mail man is truly "The United States Government." It would surprise you to know the extent in which the advice and counsel of the mail man is sought by rural Americans in many of their more personal affairs. In return it is traditional with the rural service that the mail must go through and the and the trials and hardships endured by rural carriers in serving their routes during all kinds of weather conditions go hand and hand with the growth of the service. Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

War Services

"During the war the rural carrier extended many special services one of which was to make special trips to the home of a patron, day or night with that fateful message which every loved one of those in the service of their country so dreaded to receive. It was most fitting that these messages beginning with "we regret to inform you" should be conveyed by one who knew them most intimately, and who was truly a sympathetic friend who had, in most instances, watched their loved one grow to manhood. It was the most painful duty a rural carrier ever performed.

"On November 25, 1947, occurred an event which was unprecedented in all the annals of the history of the Postal Service. First Assistant Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson received a telephone call from the White House. President Truman was on the wire and completely "floored" Mr. Donaldson by asking him to accept the high post of Postmaster General. It was a tradition that this office should be held by the National Chairman of the political party in power. This action by the President breaking a tradition and appointing a career man as Postmaster General was widely acclaimed all over the Nation and, possibly, received more favorable publicity than any other major appointment had received for a long time. A man who had literally come up through the ranks and who knew more about the Postal Service than possibly any other man was placed in charge of "his greatest business institutions of the Government. He started in the service by helping his father in a 4th

"The Department has in Mr. Donaldson, the most competent and efficient Postmaster General in the history of the service. In this connection I want to bring to your attention a matter which is of vital concern to you gentlemen and which you, in the final analysis as co-owners of the service must decide. The Postoffice Department is the only major branch of the Government which brings in revenue. While the Service was established as a truly Service institution it was deemed necessary to charge certain fees for the various services rendered. This revenue has partly defrayed the cost of the Service and the wisdom of this move has never been denied. However, it has proven to be a source of considerable embarrassment to the Department. There have always been critics who have claimed that the Postal Service should be self-supporting and the Postmaster General has been confronted with this situation many times in asking Congress for the necessary appropriations to run the Department. Postmaster General Donaldson was confronted with the greatest deficit in the history of the Department. This was inevitable for various reasons. The Service has been constantly growing with necessary increasing costs. Express rates had risen sharply throwing a greatly increased volume of parcel post on the Service. Parcel post has always been carried at a great loss. Salaries of all personnel were raised to meet the increased cost of living. Something had to be done. Critics would soon be saying that the affairs of the Department had just as well be in the hands of a politician if a career man who should know all the answers could not keep out of the red. There was just one thing to do and Postmaster General Donaldson placed the solution squarely in the hands of Congress by presenting legislation which would increase postal rates commensurate with the cost of operations. First class letters are the only class of mail which has ever been self supporting. Second class (newspapers and periodicals) third class and parcel post are carried at a great loss. It has been rather amusing to note the complete about face by some of the most powerful critics of the Service. Those who have been clamoring that the Service should be self-supporting are now piously proclaiming that the Postal Service was established as a Service Institution and should be financed out of the general revenue as are other Departments of the Government. It is for you, the American people to decide. In your thinking you must determine whether the great Postal Service should be a service institution and therefore removed from the burden of completely supporting itself. If you decide it should pay its way then certainly funds or revenue must be provided and this can only be done by a readjustment of postal rates on classes of mail that is carried at a great loss.

"The Postal Service has kept pace with the growth of America. It is necessary to maintain and promote the high ideals it has established and every American citizen should take just pride in this great institution which has played such a vital part in making America a truly great."

Dr. J. T. Keeling
The following account of the death of Dr. J. T. Keeling, a former Sedalia, appeared in the August 4, issue of The News Chronicle published in Scott City, Kansas.

"Dr. J. T. Keeling, resident of this city since 1919, died unexpectedly last Thursday evening at his home in this city. He had suffered from a heart ailment the past few years, but it was not thought his condition was serious.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from the Baptist church, by Rev. L. Verne Morris and Rev. H. H. McLeod. Burial was in the Scott county cemetery.

"Dr. Keeling had practiced dentistry in Scott City almost thirty years, retiring about two years ago an account of ill health which it was thought was brought on by hard work during the war period when dentists were scarce and patients came to him from all over western Kansas. He had a wide acquaintance over this area, and often did services for those whom he did not expect would be able to reimburse him.

"Dr. John Talbot Keeling, son of J. A. and Anne Keeling, was born at Fayette, Mo., Dec. 20, 1891. He died at the age of 57 years. When he was a small boy the family moved to Sedalia, Mo., where he graduated from the high school. Later he attended and graduated from the Western Dental college of Kansas City.

"On Dec. 15, 1917 Dr. Keeling was united in marriage to Mildred Theibaud. Two sons and two daughters were born to them. One son, J. D. Keeling, a lieutenant (full grade) in the Navy air corps during the recent war, lost his life when his plane was shot down while attacking a Japanese ship early in 1945.

"Dr. and Mrs. Keeling came to Scott City in 1919 where Dr. Keeling set up offices for the practice of dentistry which he continued until his recent retirement. During his residence here he had been active in varied community interests. Being a star athlete during his own school days, he volunteered in a time of need for the position as coach in the Scott Community high school and developed some star basketball teams, one of which went through the state finals. For a few years he was engaged part time in farming and later was a partner in the building house at the state park. When Scott City was in dire need of more residences a few years ago, he started an extensive housing project which has greatly relieved the congestion. Since his retirement he has devoted his full time to his properties.

"Dr. Keeling united with the Baptist church years ago, and for several years was a teacher in the Sunday school of the local congregation.

"He is survived by his wife, and his aged mother, Mrs. J. A. Keeling of Scott City; a sister, Mrs. Lucille Adams of Chicago; a son, James D. Keeling of Scott City, two daughters, Mrs. Lance Drake of Denver and Mary Ann of the home, and two grandsons Mary Ann was not able to be present at the funeral services on account of an injury received while visiting in Colorado."

He had been ill of complications over an extended period but his death was due to a paralytic stroke.

Mr. Allison was born June 30, 1877 at Wytheville, Va., son of Robert and Susan Allison. When he was 18 months of age, his mother died, and with his father, he came to this section of the country where he had made his home the remainder of his life in Cooper county, in the Cotton community. On September 7, 1898 he was married to Ida Baughman.

Those surviving are his wife, and three children, Leslie and Leonard Allison and Mrs. Edward Baker all of the Clarksburg community, also four grandchildren and two step grandchildren.

Mr. Roehrs was born in Fintel, Hanover, Germany, on June 3, 1859, the son of Christopher and Maria Roehrs. At the age of 19 he came to America, settling in St. Louis. Earth Shocks In Ecuador QUITO, Ecuador, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Strong earth shocks were reported last night in already ravaged Ambato, center of the area struck by a series of disastrous earthquakes which began last week.

A radio broadcast from Ambato said that remaining inhabitants of the town were panic-stricken as a few more houses, weakened by previous tremors, collapsed. The broadcast did not say whether there were any new casualties.

Relief forces meanwhile pushed additional supplies into the stricken area, where the government estimates 5,000 persons were killed last week.

Additional tents and canvas were shipped to the region, about 90 miles south of Quito, by truck and plane. The American Red Cross said ten U. S. Airforce transport planes were en route here from the canal zone with tents to house some 3,000 persons.

Truman Says Vaughan Not Be Suspended

"Aroma Of Mystery" Mundt States During Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A fleeting mention of the shipment of a deep freezer to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan created today what Senator Mundt (R-S.D.) called an "aroma of mystery" in the Senate investigation of "five percenters."

But President Truman told his news conference the frequent mention of his Army aide in the Senate probe had not changed his opinion of Vaughan. He made plain that Vaughan was not going to be suspended, as two other generals have been.

A Milwaukee businessman told the Senators he sent the freezer to Vaughan. It was paid for, said witness Albert J. Gross, by the Albert Verley Co., Chicago perfume manufacturers.

Several other Washingtonians got home freezers paid for by the perfume company, Gross added, and he was stopped at about that point while Senators and staff members buzzed among themselves.

Halts Line Of Testimony
Chairman Hoey (D-NC) ruled that the special investigating subcommittee didn't know yet whether the freezers were purchases or gifts. He stopped the line of testimony, pending further evidence.

But Mundt, speaking swiftly, already had slipped into the record a remark that it was the "assumption" Vaughan had not paid for his freezer.

Mundt and a fellow Republican, Senator McCarthy (Wis.) "reluctantly" agreed to halt the questioning. Mundt complained, however, that Hoey's ruling left "an aroma of mystery."

It was not the only mystery. The Verle company, McCarthy recalled, formerly employed John Maragon, the fabulous former bootblack who visits Vaughan at the White House and has been questioned privately by the committee.

Nor was it the only aroma. As tension heightened in the small and crowded hearing chamber, Senator McCarthy broke it by suggesting the committee staff might try to find Senator Mundt some cigars "with tobacco in them." Mundt joined in the laughter and went on emitting billows of smoke.

Senator Mundt heatedly charged today that a letter written by a War Assets Administration employee to James V. Hunt, in August, 1947, was a "blatant invitation for bribery or connivance of some kind."

Mundt, a member of the Senate investigating subcommittee, spoke out after a committee investigator had read the contents of a letter which he said was written by Clarence W. Oehler to Hunt.

Another letter told of Oehler obtaining for Hunt match covers with "White House," "H. H. V." and "H. S. T." printed on them.

Hunt, now a Washington business counselor, has been a prime figure in the committee's inquiry into activities of "five percenters"—individuals who seek out government contracts for others for a fee.

The committee investigation previously has developed that Hunt ordered books of match folders bearing the imprint "swiped from Harry S. Truman." Hunt said then that he was acting at the request of the White House.

Vaughan's Initials
"H. H. V." are the initials of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, whose name figured in the inquiry.

Francis D. Flanagan, committee investigator, said that Oehler was a warehouse specialist for the WAA in the western area at the time he wrote letters to Hunt, formerly a $50-a-day consultant for WAA in Washington.

Oehler, now with the American Industrial Development Corporation of St. Louis, was in the room during Flanagan's testimony.

The committee also planned to take the lid off evidence that led to suspension of the army's chemical corps chief, Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, last July 15.

Flanagan said the correspondence which he read to the committee was taken from Hunt's files.

Ire Was Aroused
Mundt's ire was aroused when the investigator read a letter dated Aug. 15, 1947, which referred to an Aug. 7 letter from Hunt to Oehler.

In the letter, Oehler told Hunt of plans to sell in his area automotive parts worth about $100,000 in acquisition value. Oehler wrote that "I will direct the program." He added that "I have carte blanche to sell them now on negotiated or bid or odd lot sale."

The letter said "This is confidential information." Flanagan said the words "confidential information" were underlined. The letter told Hunt "the time is ripe" to get into operation. It went on to say that he thought same manufacturers and dealers "can make a good deal procuring these parts."

Mundt then spoke out. He also wanted to know if there was anything in the letter that offers "any justification for a War Assets Administration employee passing along this secret information."

ing that there has been no identification of the cause as yet.

Germans Condemn All But Themselves For Their Woes

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Displays of intense nationalism and strident criticism of the Allied occupation have reached a high pitch during the Western German election campaign which reaches its climax Sunday.

The Germans are condemning everyone except themselves for the country's woes. There is an oratorical revolt against allied controls. The international Ruhr authority has been one of the prime objects of attack. So has the reparations program.

German leaders cite the presence in the west of 11,000,000 German refugees from the Polish and Russian zones as a development which the allies have refused to consider in its relationship to cost of government and reparations charges.

The campaign started out on domestic issues—Socialism versus enterprise, states rights versus centralized government, the extent of federal economic controls, and the like.

The German political leaders for the most part supported the allied stand at the Paris conference ministers which failed to make any progress toward German unification. They wanted no compromise with Russia which might mean any interference or curtailment of the approach to independence promised by their projected new government.

So the Communists rallied at the other parties as dividers of Germany and called them collaborators.

To squelch this, the leaders of all major parties began to prove their freedom to criticize the allies. The vilification, it seems to me, has been permitted to reach a pitch far beyond what is technically allowed under the occupation rules. The German leaders who profess to be on "our side" have come pretty close to the same sort of thing for which the British once jailed Max Reichmann, the Communist leader.

Britain and France have taken most of the pummeling. More prudence has been displayed regarding the U. S. which makes food shipments and other contributions to the German economy.

A good many allied authorities take the attitude that its just politics. The same type of thing to which democracies become accustomed in their own elections. But there have been anti-semitic and other demonstrations distressingly reminiscent of Germany's recent history. If experienced German politicians expect to gain popular support through the type of appeals they have been making, then they must know that Germans are still incensed with a lot of ideas which will make it necessary for the allies to keep them under close surveillance.

Noted Author Critically Hurt
ATLANTA, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A speeding taxicab struck and severely injured Margaret Mitchell tonight in front of a theater.

The author of the celebrated novel of Civil War days, "Gone With The Wind," was rushed to the City Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain, leg injuries, and possibly internal injuries.

She was placed under an oxygen tent and immediate preparations were made for an operation. Physicians described her condition as critical.

Police announced the taxicab driver was arrested and charged with drunken driving, speeding and driving on the wrong side of the street.

The author's husband, John R. Marsh, said his wife saw the speeding vehicle bearing down upon her and tried to dodge it.

"Suddenly," he related, "Mrs. Marsh broke to run back to the curb. There was a loud crash as the car hit her. It dragged her 15 feet before it stopped."

The police named the cab driver as Hugh D. Gravett, 28. They quoted him as saying, "I would have missed her if she—Mrs. Marsh—had not run back towards the curb."

Miss Mitchell, whose novel won her world-wide acclaim and a Pulitzer prize, started her career with the intention of becoming a feature writer.

General Praises Bomber

Can go Anywhere And do Anything As a Combat Plane, House Group Told

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Gen. George C. Kenney said today the B-36 bomber "can go anywhere and do anything as a combat plane."

Once one of the toughest foes of the big plane, Kenney gave it this high praise before the House Armed Services committee.

"As a night bomber, operating over 40,000 feet, it is perfectly safe to take it anywhere. Nobody has a fighter plane that could touch it."

The stubby, gray-haired Air Force pioneer was a wartime allied air commander in the Pacific.

He told his story to the committee after it heard former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson take "full responsibility" for a pre-test order of 100 B-36s given in 1943 to get production rolling as quickly as possible.

Air Officer Since 1917
An air officer since 1917 and now Commander of the Air University at Maxwell Field, Ala., Kenney said his first contact with the B-36 was in 1941, when he recommended that the Air Force buy it.

This decision, he said was based on preliminary drawings and plans submitted by four airplane manufacturers. Kenney was then Chief of Procurement in the Air Materiel Command at Wright Field, Ohio.

He said he was impressed with the information that the B-36 bomber could carry a 10,000-pound bomb load 10,000 miles without refueling.

Patterson said he could recall quite clearly the day the order was placed for the 100 B-36s.

"Tom Girdler, president of Consolidated, came in to see me," Patterson said. "He asked me how long the war would last. I said I didn't know."

Difficulty Getting Subcontractors
"He then asked me: 'Do you want the B-36 in the war?'" "I told him: 'I certainly do,'" Patterson related that Girdler explained that he was having difficulty in getting subcontractors to provide needed parts for the big plane, and asked:

Patterson said he consulted with Air Force heads and "then and there gave him the order for 100 B-36s."

Asked by committee counsel, Joseph B. Keenan, if any of his decisions regarding the B-36 were "motivated in any way" by the ownership of the Consolidated concern, Patterson replied:

"Not in the slightest. I didn't have the faintest notion who had financial interest in Consolidated. I hadn't met Girdler until that day in 1943."

Approved on Merits
Kenney said he approved the B-36 plans "solely on the merits of design." This, he declared, was "the only consideration."

He said he next met the B-36 when he returned from the Pacific after the war and was given command of the Strategic Air Command in late 1946. He immediately began to inquire about the plane, which still had not flown.

Kenney said that "the plane didn't seem to be living up to expectations."

It was having "a lot of teething troubles," with propellers, the flap system, landing gear and engines, and these "were very alarming to me," he added.

Recommended Spaatz
Kenney said he recommended to Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, then Air Force Commander, that the B-36 program be reviewed and perhaps curtailed.

By June, 1948, however, most of the plane's troubles had been licked, Kenney said, adding:

"The airplane astonished me, and I think astonished everybody else. The youngsters flying it said they liked it, and with all the troubles cured, I said 'All right, I'll buy it!'"

Patterson told the committee he was not motivated by interest in any of the individuals connected with the Consolidated Aircraft company, which builds the B-36.
